MOSCOW PARLEY SUCCESSFUL

EDEN LEAVES FOR POLISH CAPITAL

LITVINOFF INDICATES AGREEMENT REACHED

Moscow, March 30. A brief sentence or two of the farewell which M. Maxim Litvinoff, Russian Foreign Commissar, addressed to the British Lord Privy Seal, Mr. Anthony Eden, to-night, indicated as clearly as an official communique that the Anglo-Russian conversations, designed to perpetuate the peace of Europe, had met with a large measure of success.

Mr. Eden, who has been conducting negotiations with the Russian Government for the past few days, left for Warsaw at 10.45 p.m. to-night, where he will carry on his Government's endeavours to assure all nations of security.

M. Litvinoff, the chief Russian figure in the parleys, and Lord Chilston, the British Ambassador at Moscow, together with high Soviet officials and diplomats, were at the station to bid Mr. Eden farewell.

The platform to the waiting train was carpeted and a picked guard of honour was drawn up along its length, while Union Jack fluttered alongside the flag of Red Russia.

A little group of busy motion picture cameramen ground away to perpetuate the scene for thousands who have read of the Anglo-Russian talks and who will want to see the principals.

In a brief broadsheet address, Mr. Eden thanked the Soviets for its hospitality, and M. Litvinoff replied: "I wish you success. Your success will be our success now."

It was indicated that the Russian and British spokesmen understood one another and had at least reached firm ground in the formulating of a common policy for the preservation of peace.—Reuter.

LESS ACTIVITY ON EXCHANGE

(Special to "Telegraph".)

New York, March 31. Reflecting the lessening activity on the New York Stock Exchange, the net loss for the year 1934 is reported as $1,060,890 as compared with $1,99,121 for the year 1933.

Hesitancy among traders still prevents the making of any definite market policies.

Favourable market factors include:

(1) Increasing lumber orders and shipment expectations;

(2) Additional refunding operations;

(3) Automobile production continues high.

Unfavourable factors include:

(1) Chain store sales for March are likely to prove unsatisfactory owing to the international monetary situation;

(2) Continued threats of strikes;

(3) Foreign operators holding aloof.

Cotton prices were two points up to nine points lower on the New York Cotton Exchange yesterday.

Trading was featured by the continued steadiness of old positions and the runned easiness of the new month.

The tight spot situation and the straddling operations by foreign interests on the export subsidy plan together with the growing opposition to the processing tax, brought sufficient buying to the near months to hold them steady above the previous levels by a few points.

Most of the liquidation came from traders profit-taking and from the South and New Orleans.—Central News.

NOODLES FORGER'S UNDOING

TOOK OFF BEARD FOR MEAL

BIG GANG ROUND-UP

(Special to "Telegraph".)

Tokyo, April 1. A gang leader's love of noodles resulted to-day in the round-up of five forgers and the seizure of millions of yen in forged Government bonds.

The gang chief, Hisa Ohonda had eluded the police for three years, although his face and record was known to them. He had been wearing a false beard all this while and mixing freely about the city, it transpires.

But he removed the false beard while in a restaurant last night in order to more comfortably eat a dish of steaming, fragrant noodles. Somebody recognised him.

A few minutes later Ohonda was in police custody and to-day his confederates, and their stock of spurious bonds, were also under lock and key.—United Press.

CHINA DISTILLERY OPENED

TAKES CARE OF DOMESTIC NEEDS

Shanghai, March 31. Ceremonies presided over by Mr. Chen Kung-po, Minister of Industry, were held here this afternoon in connection with the inauguration of the first Chinese Spirit Manufacturing Plant, all equipment and machinery of which were purchased from England.

This is partially a Government enterprise and is financed with capital of $1,500,000. The capacity of the plant is said to be 700,000 gallons of spirit daily, which is sufficient to meet domestic demands.

In a speech delivered before the opening Mr. Chen Kung-po expressed the hope that the Chinese Spirit Manufacturing Plant represents the first step toward developing various branches of the industry in China through co-operation between the Government and the merchants and industrialists.—Central News.

DARWIN- LYMPNE RECORD

BRITISH PLANE'S FAST TIME

TAKES JUST OVER WEEK

(Special to "Telegraph".)

(By Telegraph. Copyright. Telegraphic Messages Ordinance, 1894. Received, April 1, 9.30 a.m.)

London, March 30.

A new record for an Australia-England solo flight has been established by the English aviator H. L. Brooke, who left Port Darwin at 8.05 p.m. G.M.T. on March 23 and landed at Lympne at 3.55 p.m. to-day.

He thus broke the old unofficial record set by C. J. Melrose, the young Australian flier, by thirteen hours ten minutes. Melrose, last September, flew from Australia to England in eight days nine hours.

Both Melrose and Brooke were entered in the England to Australia Air Derby last year. On that occasion Melrose won the solo prize and Brooke took 26 days 20 hours for the passage to Port Darwin.

Brooke was to-day flying a new type of Miles Hawk machine, one of the speediest and sturdiest of modern models.—Reuter Special.

Through an unfortunate slip, the reading matter accompanying two illustrations in Saturday's issue of the Telegraph Pictorial Supplement became transposed. GALE TAKES HEAVY TOLL IN ITALY

MORE THAN SCORE DROWNED

MANY STILL MISSING

(Special to "Telegraph".)

(By Telegraph. Copyright. Telegraphic Messages Ordinance, 1894. Received, April 1, 9.30 a.m.)

Rome, March 30.

Twenty-three persons were drowned to-day when a violent cyclone swept the western coast of the Adriatic Sea.

Immense waves overwhelmed and sank a number of fishing boats and much damage to property resulted from the furious wind. Sea side dwellings were in some places demolished.

Twenty fishing boats, with fifty men aboard, are still missing. It is hoped they have made shelter in some out-of-the-way place, which will account for their not having communicated with their base as yet.

As a result of the gale there was a phenomenally low tide in Venice, causing many of the canals to run dry and resulting in much inconvenience.—Reuter Special.

ABYSSINIA AGAIN CALLS TO LEAGUE

ASKS IMMEDIATE INTERVENTION

DISPUTE WITH ITALY

Geneva, March 30.

The Abyssinian Government, having broken off direct negotiations with Rome over the Italian-Somaliland frontier dispute, has addressed a fresh communication to the League of Nations.

The message states that with regard to the dispute with Italy it wished the Council to take up its appeal under Article XV without delay.

Earlier Rome despatches stated that while Abyssinia's demands seemed to indicate that a Commission of Arbitration might be appointed, it was always very doubtful if any such body could be acceptable to both Italy and Abyssinia, and whose decisions would be respected as being final.

Italian troops, meanwhile, have been hurried to North Africa and are prepared for any eventuality, while for some time past Abyssinia has been mobilising her fighting men to meet a possible encroachment on her territory.—Reuter.

COLDEST APRIL DAY FOR YEARS

CHILL SPELL MAY LAST TWO DAYS

The cold snap which Hongkong is at present experiencing is most unusual for this time of the year.

This morning, at 7 o'clock, the Royal Observatory registered a temperature of 57 degrees, which is the lowest recorded for any April since 1925. In that year, a temperature of 62.4 was registered on April 9.

The lowest April temperature ever recorded in Hongkong was 61.8, in 1906.

Actually, it was colder last night than in the early hours of this morning, for at 8 p.m., a temperature of 66.6 was recorded at the Observatory.

Observatory officials expect the cold snap to continue for another two days at least.

REHABILITATION OF KIANGSI

INDUSTRIAL PROJECTS CONTEMPLATED

Shanghai, Apr. 1.

In a statement made to pressmen, Mr. Kung Hsueh-sui, Commissioner of Construction of the Kiangsi Provincial Government, who is due to discuss detailed matters in connection with a $2,200,000 loan from the Chinese Finance Company to finance the construction of a water-works and an electric power plant in Nanchang, declared that negotiations were in progress with certain German merchants for the supply of machinery and other mechanical equipment for these two enterprises.

He went on to say that, along side with the rehabilitation of the former Red districts in the province, the Provincial Government of Kiangsi would proceed with another ambitious industrial development plan, including the building of a paper mill, timber yard and porcelain factory.

Selection will be severe and extensive consideration will be given to married and professional men.

It is now thought that the German armed forces will reach 760,000 men.

Preparations for the accommodation of the new army are well advanced.

The new defence law will announce the creation of a National Defence Council, in which the famous strategist Field Marshal Erich Friedrich Wilhelm Ludendorff and General Hans von Seeckt, former Chief of the Army and in charge of re-organisation of the Reichswehr in 1920-22, will be most influential members.

During the War, Field Marshal Ludendorff was Chief of Staff to Field Marshal von Hindenburg, General von Seeckt was Chief of Staff to the Third Army during the War and was, until recently, military adviser to General Chiang Kai-shek.—Reuter.

LOAN ISSUE ENTIRELY TAKEN UP

Shanghai, Apr. 1.

It is reliably learned that Mr. T. V. Soong has accepted the appointment as chairman of the Board of Directors of the Bank of China, while the governorship of the Bank is to be offered to Mr. Soong Hian-chang.

When interviewed, Dr. H. H. Kung, Finance Minister, expressed the belief that the Ministry of Finance would likely confirm the resolution adopted by the extraordinary meeting of shareholders of the Bank of China, authorising the increase of its reserve capital from $26,000,000 to $40,000,000.

The $100,000,000 worth of loan bonds were issued from to-day, but will not be placed for sale in the market as they will be fully absorbed by the Central Bank of China, the Bank of China and the Bank of Communications.

PREPARATION FOR CONFLICT

GERMANY READY BY NEXT MARCH

BUILDING UP GIGANTIC STOCKS FOR WAR

(By Telegraph. Copyright. Telegraphic Messages Ordinance, 1894. Received, April 1, 9.30 a.m.)

Geneva, March 30. A canvass of the Disarmament Conference has revealed the consensus of opinion that Germany will be ready for a major war by next March.

It is baldly stated here that the German War Ministry began large scale military production last October from blueprints prepared a long time before. At present the Government is building and assembling gigantic stocks of war materials of all sorts.

Including the regular army pilots and the reserve, it is estimated that Germany has 3,300 flying men, perfectly trained, compared to the 2,200 which Great Britain can put into the air, and the 5,000 which France has available.

I must tell you the most priceless joke . . . something in the nature of a faux pas. Last night, our new Manager and his wife dropped in for a chat, and she is really a sweet little thing. She and I were discussing various domestic and other problems, and happened to get on to the question of shoes. I told her that there was no need to worry about that sort of thing out here, because Gordon's are so thoroughly reliable and up-to-date. While we were chinwagging away, Bungho was doing his best with the Taipan . . . such a cheery soul . . . and whether he was only dropping a hint or not, I cannot for the life of me say . . . but evidently he overheard me use the name "Gordon's" . . . and thereupon interjected with the remark . . . "I don't mind if I do!" Of course, it was extremely tactful, because we were just wondering whether to offer cocktails or not. They stayed on to pot-luck and we quite enjoyed ourselves. By the way, I've decided to go in for Gordon's instalment plan . . . a really fine way of making the budget cover shoe items. When it becomes generally known everybody will be doing it.

Doctors Advise This Natural Way to Make Child Hungry ... Restore Buoyant Health!

Almost all child ailments that cause mothers so much worry are due to just one thing—authorities call it the intestinal absorption of poisons. This distressing condition occurs even when a child's habits may seem regular. The stomach is upset. Oatmeal becomes nervous and cross.

Now this insidious condition can be corrected naturally and quickly with a little Castoria which tastes so very good, children beg for it.

This remarkable preparation swiftly purges the system, banishes poisons, settles the stomach and improves digestion. Then Nature does the rest. Appetite returns. Disposition improves. And soon the child is again sturdy, healthy and sunny.

Let Castoria take care of your child's health. Give it at the first

LIFE AT SEA IS DULLNOTHING TO WORRY ABOUT
FORTY YEARS
IN SHIPS

By LEE BRACE

After nearly two score years experience I can say quite truthfully that life at sea to-day is dull and monotonous. It was different, certainly, in the days of sailing ships, but the modern steamer has completely altered things.

Small boys will not believe this. For them the sea still spells romance. Older folks, especially those who have someone at sea, will not believe it either. To them every puff of wind is half a gale, and every gale what they firmly believe to be a storm. When the wind howls round the chimney pots, and windows rattle in their frames, they are concerned for their folk at sea. Quite apart from the fact that the ship to which their thoughts fly may at that particular moment be leaping along in flat calm in the Tropics, they quite wrongly imagine that wind inevitably means danger.

In a well-found ship bad weather, even what the sailor terms bad weather, means discomfort rather than danger. Danger and disaster are usually the result of defects to rudder, propeller, or machinery—anything that prevents the ship being kept under proper control. Only in such circumstances is bad weather really dangerous.

NOTHING TO WORRY ABOUT

Since I first went to sea nearly 40 years ago I have only encountered two storms (using the word properly), although I have been through many a gale. But, as I have said, a gale is nothing to worry about, and against such weather must be weighed months and months of fine weather.

This, however, was not quite the side of seafaring to which I referred when I took as a title the bald statement that life at sea is dull. What I was thinking of is the normal life, and not the odd happening which make up page news, although they affect but a fraction of one per cent. of the ships at sea.

Let me draw aside the veil of romance and reveal the sea life for what it is, an everyday job of work that offers little in the way of variety, but more often than not dull monotony, and which necessarily robs its followers of the wider and much more interesting life open to those who live and work ashore.

One at least sees the world! Who was it said with deadly truth, "A sailor is one who visits all countries and sees none?" The capital in a foreign port is merely a signal for cargo work. Down the hold all day, tallying cargo, guarding against pilfering or keeping watch to see that only the proper packages are discharged. Night work is by no means uncommon. An odd evening ashore, and with luck a whole Sunday, it does not sound very thrilling, does it?

BURDEN OF LEISURE

What of the time actually at sea? Two spells of four hours each on the bridge, and the rest of the time is your own. Or some of it at least, for there are other odds and ends of duties besides actual watch-keeping. But you do have leisure. The trouble is what to do with it. The same few yarns. No change, no relief. Day after day the same old thing. A voyage may last two years with the same half-dozen shipmates.

On the bridge, occasional sights, an occasional azimuth, and a circle of horizon around you. Back and forth across the bridge you pad, your thoughts for company. What are you there for? Just waiting. You do not even have the satisfaction of feeling that you are "doing" something. Nothing ever happens, or at least it happens so seldom that it amounts to the same thing. But because it may happen, it is absolutely essential that you keep a bright lookout and . . . pad back and forth, back and forth, for four interminable hours.

LEeks WITH WHITE SAUCE

HERE is a delicious way of serving leeks. Choose thick white ones, and cut off most of the green tails—do not throw them away, as they will do for broth. Tie the leeks into bundles of 3 or 4 with narrow white tape, and boil till tender. Drain them, very thoroughly of water; this is important, as, otherwise, they will be very sodden. While they are cooking, make some white sauce—one oz. butter melted in a small pan, one oz. flour stirred in, 1/2 pint of milk added gradually; stir all the time the sauce boils—eight minutes. Remove the tape from the leeks, place each little bundle on a large slice of hot buttered toast, and pour the white sauce all over them.

Ah, but when one gets command? Well, things are better then, of course. You have much more responsibility, for one thing; and about the same salary as a senior clerk in a decent office who has no responsibility at all. And you have more leisure, for you do not keep a regular watch.

TAKING TO CARPENTRY

But your extra leisure is not much good to you, for your choice of company is limited to the chief engineer, one solitary person. Out of sheer boredom you may mount the bridge, ostensibly as master but in reality to have a yarn with the officer of the watch. That is permitted, though it isn't done, to hobnob with the officers when off watch.

Perhaps I should explain here for the benefit of the uninitiated that I am speaking of the average cargo steamer, which forms about 80 per cent. of the British merchant service.

Many masters take to carpentry to keep them from dying of ennui, but they are apt to absorb too much of the time of the ship's carpenter, and the chief officer doesn't like that. Others contrive to take a little too much interest in the work of the ship, and as that

This brief outline might be filled in with innumerable details to prove my point, but I have told enough to show that a life at sea is in general a dull and monotonous procession of days with little if anything for an intelligent man to get his teeth into.

What is the old saying? "Who'd sell a farm and go to sea?"

WAR RASH IN
MANCHUKUOFEVER CATCHING IN BORDER AREASFRONTIER
STRATEGY

PEIPING. With Soviet Russia and Japan glaring at each other across the Amur River, desperately building railroads, frontier fortifications and flying fields, it has not taken long for the virus of belligerent distrust and its resultant war scare fever to permeate their "wards," Sovietized Outer Mongolia and Manchukuo.

The first outbreak of the rash occurred not long ago when Japanese-Manchukuo patrols clashed with Outer Mongolian frontier guards near Bair Nor, a large lake 160 miles south of Manchukuo, where the Chinese Eastern Railroad crosses the Siberian border to join the Trans-Siberian. Japanese mapmakers had begun to make all maps with the lake entirely within Hsingan Province of Manchukuo. Later, when Mongol patrols were observed inside this new boundary, they were first warned, then driven out by a combined Japanese-Manchukuo column.

Liberated and immediate application of diplomatic balm has apparently ensured that the rash will not spread at present, but reports filtering in from Outer Mongolia as well as from Manchukuo indicate that elaborate defence preparations are being undertaken on both sides of the line.

STRATEGIC IMPORT

The strategic importance of this particular area has often been stressed. Presuming a new Russo-Japanese war in the Far East, it is commonly taken for granted that one of the major Japanese drives will be directed at the supposedly vulnerable stretch of the Trans-Siberian Railway between Lake Baikal and Chita. The attacking column, it is assumed, would advance westward from Dondonor or from the region of Bair Nor onto the steppes of eastern Outer Mongolia, then swing northward, attempt to cut the Siberian frontier and strike at the railway. A strongly militarised Outer Mongolia, it will thus be seen, would form an important first line of defence for the Soviets.

Owing to careful guarding of military secrets by the Japanese, information regarding what is going on in Manchukuo is meagre. One official report recently published, however, indicates that the entire northern half of the Manchukuo-Mongolian frontier is to be guarded by a series of frontier posts. The exact nature of these posts is not announced, but there will be twenty-eight of them, placed at strategic points along a 600-mile stretch of the border.

The avowed object of these posts is "to prevent further encroachment on Manchukuo" by the Outer Mongolians, that is to say, to keep them from crossing the border.

One Job Gone Wrong!

SUCCESS BORN OF FAILURE PARADOXICAL OCCASIONS IN LIFE OF MAN

By OLIVER BALDWIN

There are occasions in the lives of most men and women when they are forced, perhaps by unemployment or dissatisfaction, or even by overhearing some chance remark, to ask themselves whether or not they are what is termed a "failure." If they are in poor health they will generally decide that they are. Growing more and more depressed, they end by becoming a burden to themselves and a pest to their friends, or even an object of pity at a coroner's inquest.

There is rarely any need for such a tragedy, for the trouble invariably starts with a wrong understanding of what failure is. Of course, if you set yourself some high standard such as to be Prime Minister, or some unnecessary standard, such as to be made a knight; or some difficult standard, such as to write articles for a living, and do not succeed in attaining it, you may well call yourself a failure in that one direction.

A. S. D. POINT OF VIEW

The mistake is to consider that failure in attaining one's professional-objective necessarily entails failure in life. It is only lately that success or failure has become bound up with materialism, for so hard is the struggle to-day for economic existence that we bring all things down to a question of pounds, shillings, and pence.

Yet, even materially success is only relative; for a successful agricultural labourer at 30s. a week is as far removed from material failure as is a successful business man at £6,000 a year.

Failure must never be measured in terms of money, for that way lies a completely false conception of existence. It is generally the materially-minded who appraise such things, and the false values they create are on a par with jealousy of another's new clothes or of another's social connections.

There can be no failure where honest work is concerned. The doing of one's best may not bring success, but it is a definite contradiction of failure in any sense but the most cruel.

In appraising such a thing, consideration must be made for your natural capability and the suitability of the life's work undertaken. It is only when that is understood that failure or success can truly be judged.

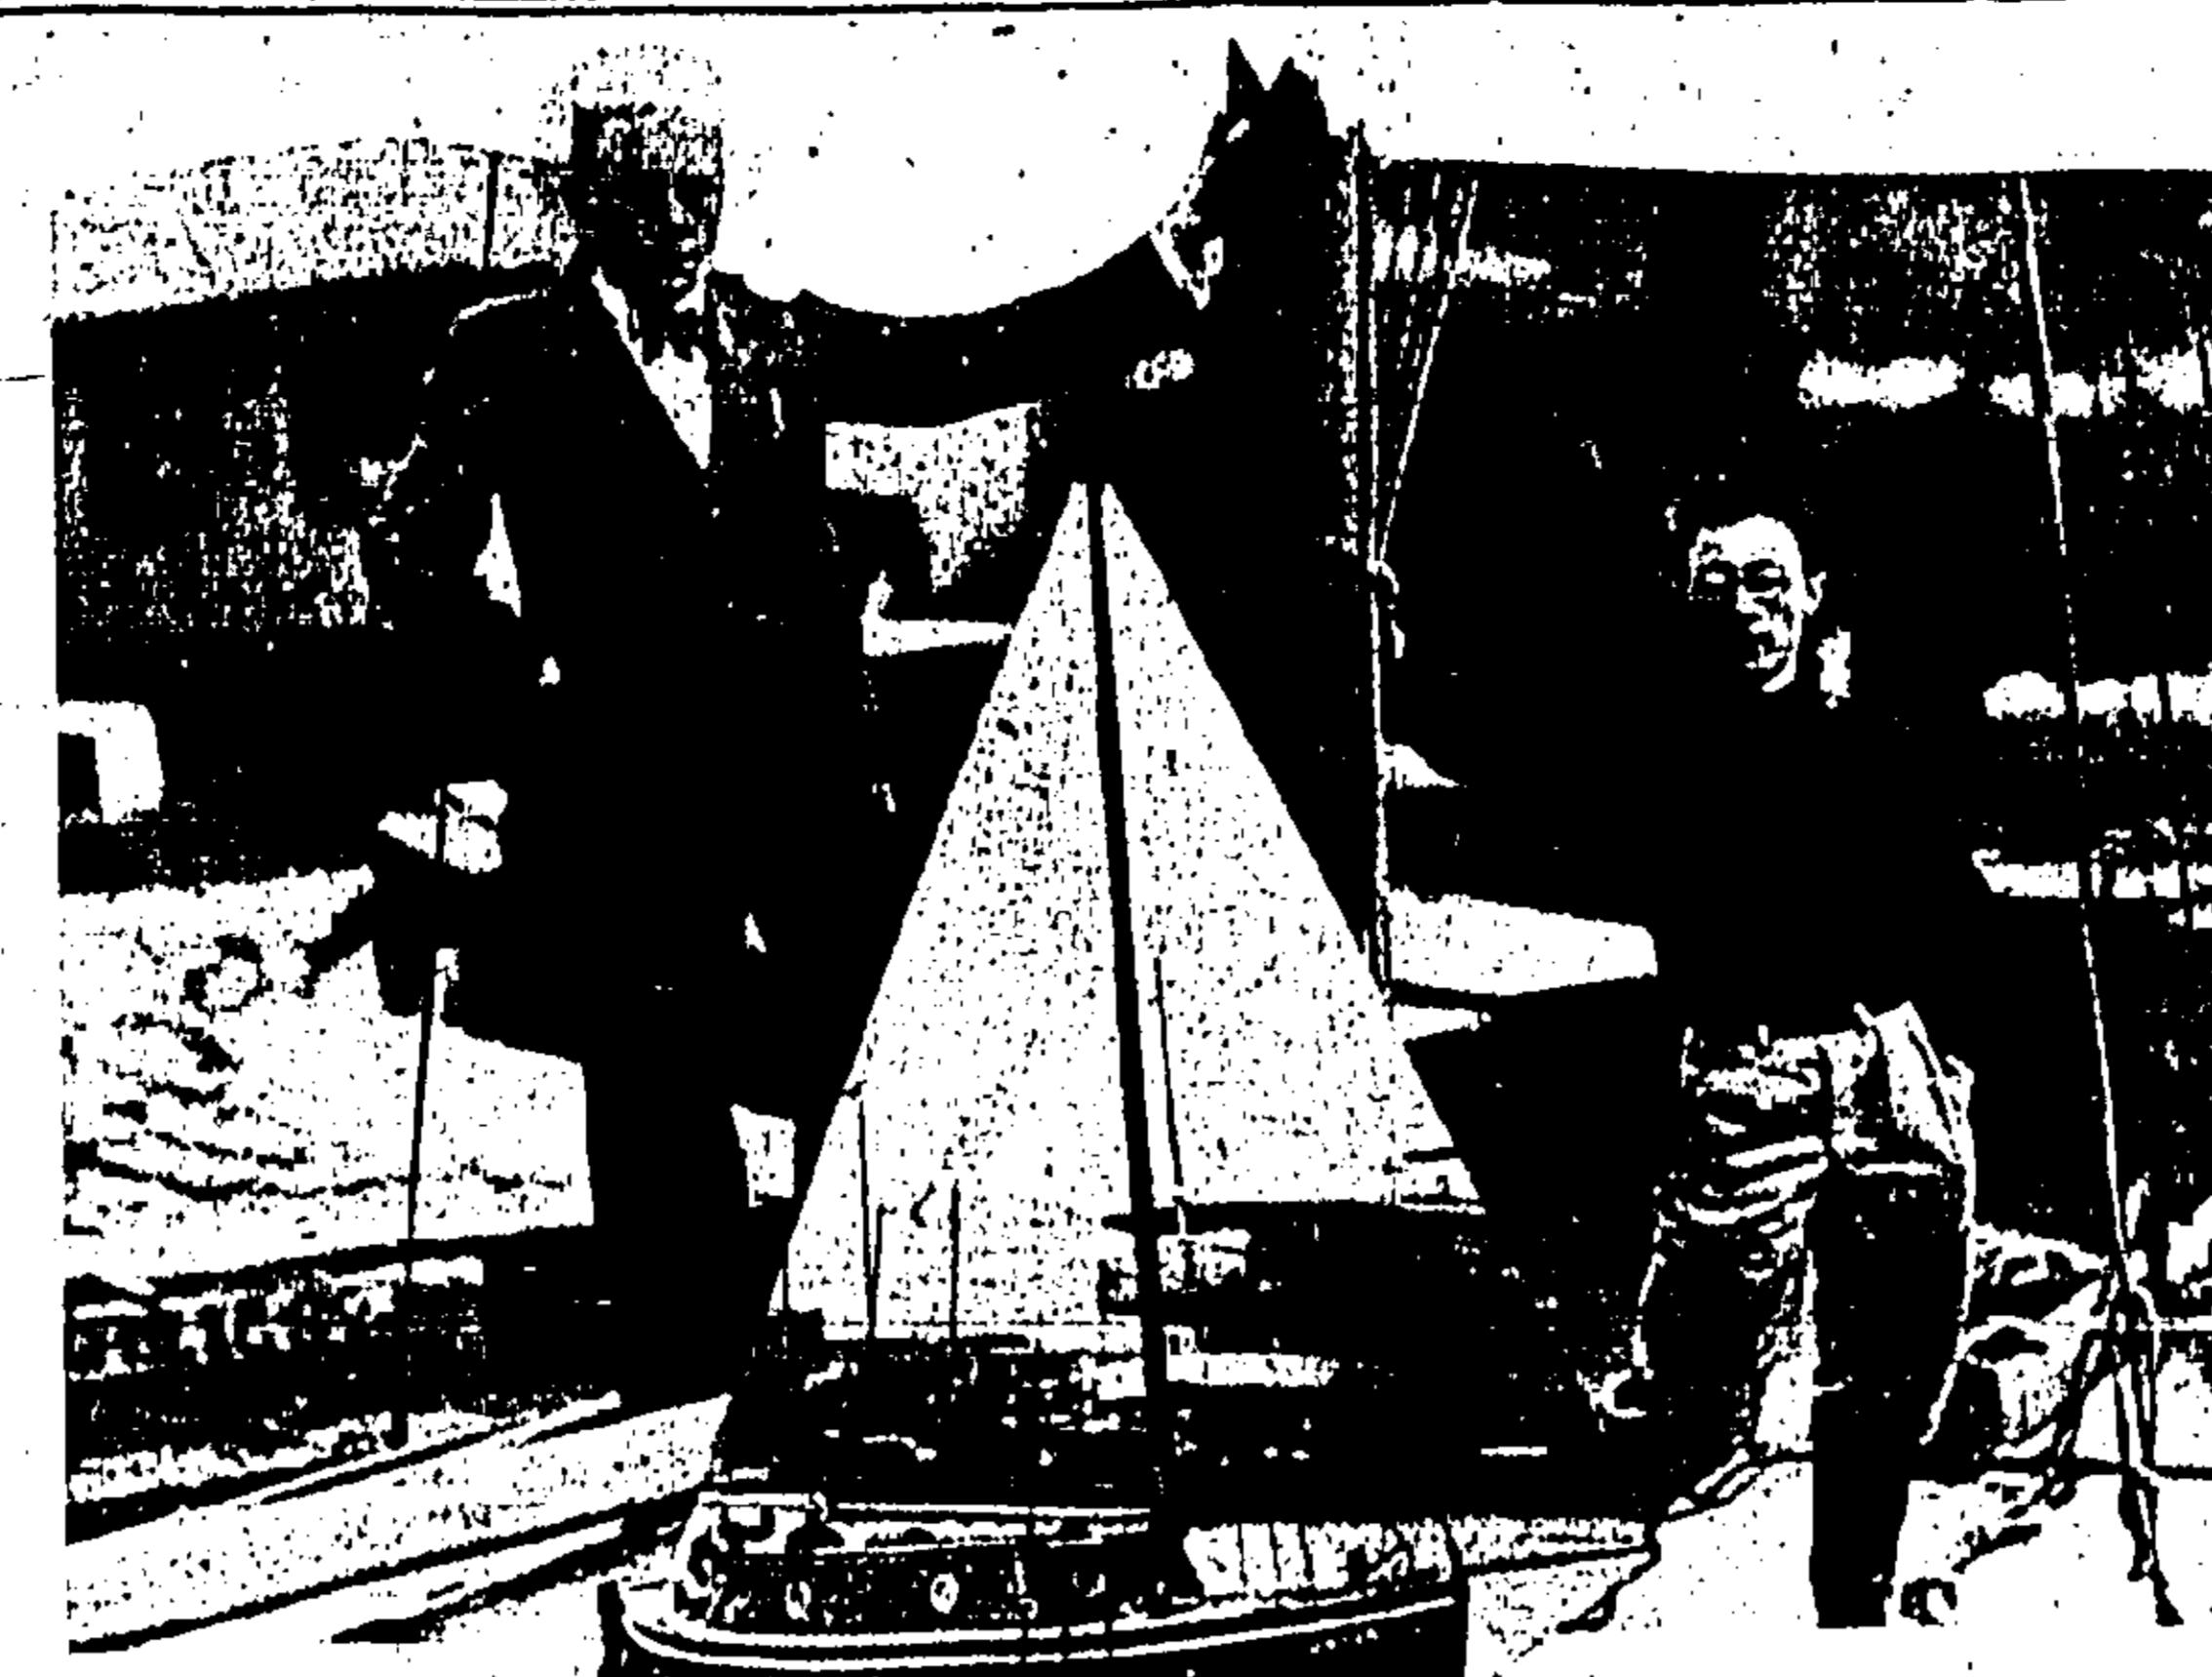

There are greater things than material success, and no man can be called a failure who has made the life of a fellow-creature or of a dumb animal happier. The criminal who is sentenced for a solitary offence against society could only be truly a failure in life if that one action of his outweighed all his past; and there are very few people of whom that could ever be said.

OBJECT OF EXISTENCE

I have known many people who have been called failures by more fortunate people, but compared with several much-admired successful people these failures become people for whom to be thankful. Apart from judging a man a failure in some special occupation, a general judgment cannot be made unless you define the object of existence.

If it be to make money or to attain a high social position, then the failures in life can be counted in their millions. If, on the other hand, it be to make the world a happier or saner place for the vast majority of its inhabitants, then are "failures" often "successes."

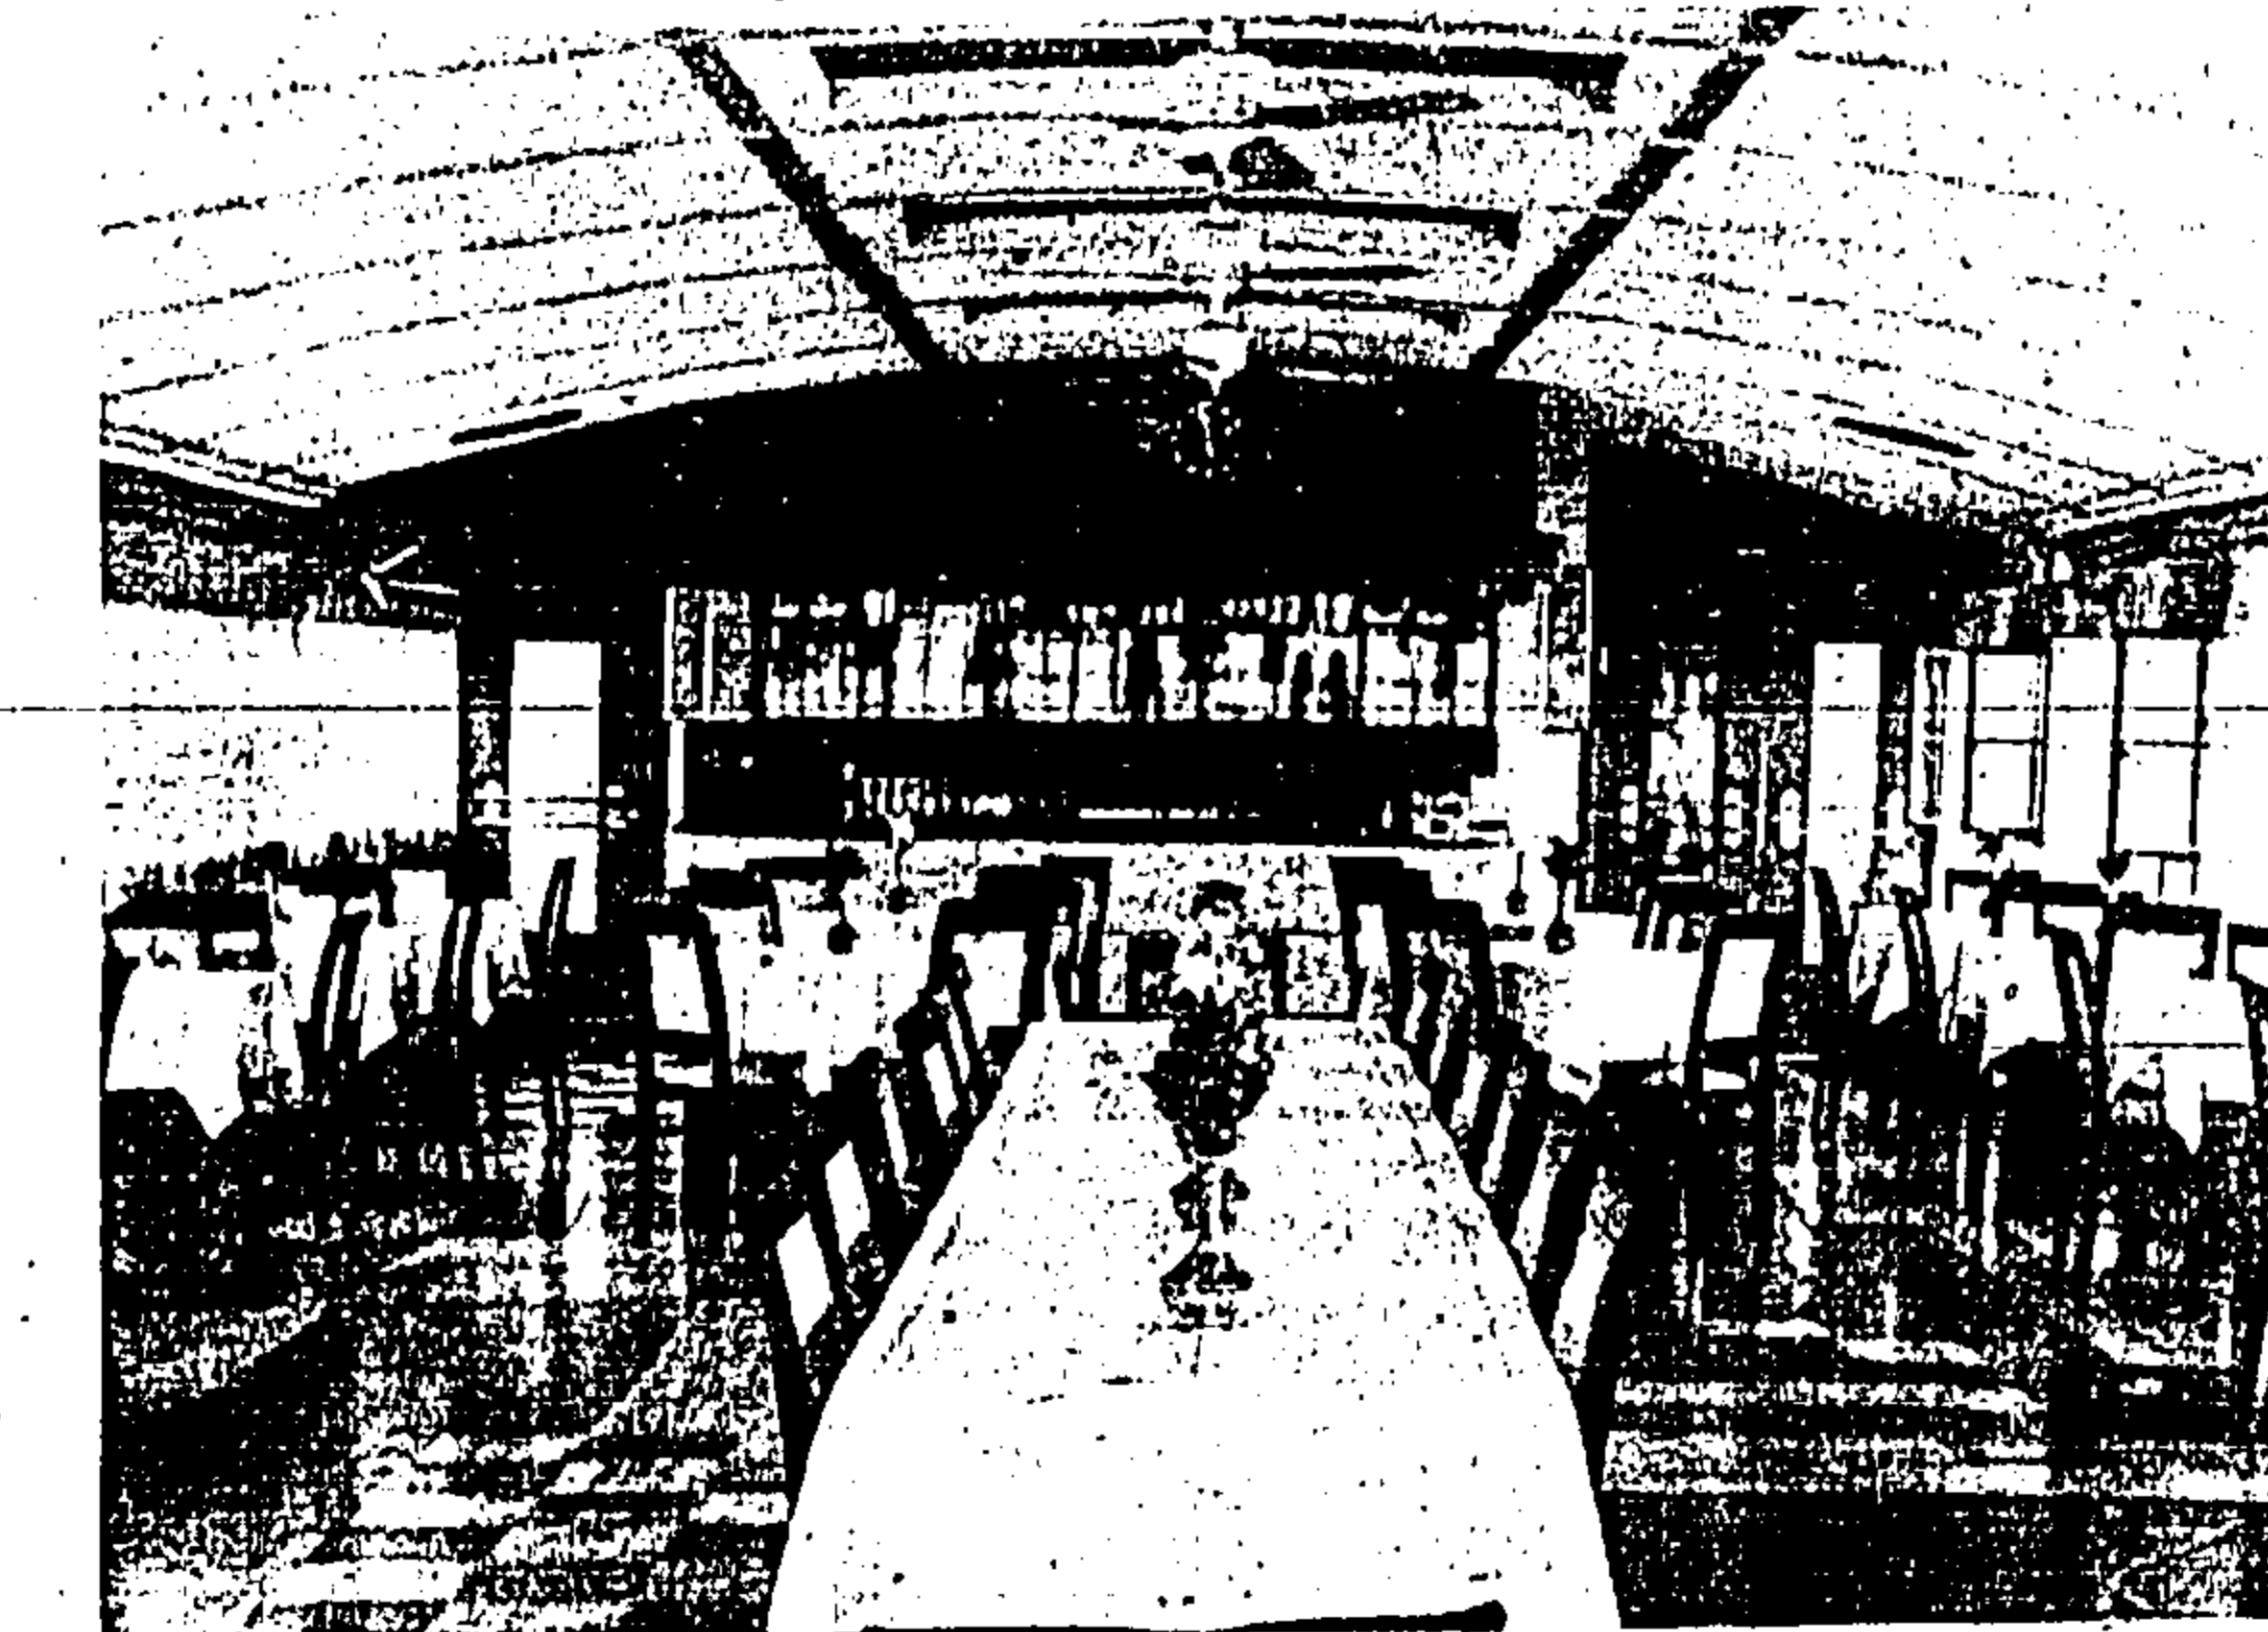

In this connection we must not forget that the world is made happier and saner by little individual

Much interest was shown in the pretty Shanghai wedding, which took place at Holy Trinity Cathedral between Mr. Eric G. There was a large attendance both at the church and at the reception which was later held at the Masonic Hall.

The huge new pontoon of the City Government Ferry moored off the Peking Road jetty was officially opened last week, a reception being held in the spacious and beautifully arranged restaurant on the promenade deck. Many high officials of the City Government and the S.M.C. attended. The above picture shows a view of the restaurant which is expected to prove very popular especially in the summer months, when Shanghailanders will be making extensive use of the City Government's boats. The cuisine is under supervision of a former chief cook of Marcel's.

The photo above of Mr. Lin Sen, President of the National Government, was taken at Nanking when prominent officials participated in a tree planting ceremony as part of the observance of the tenth anniversary of the death of Dr. Sun Yat-sen.

It is any wonder that thousands of pilgrims climb the beautiful Fujiyama every year?

things are but the appendages of weak humanity. He was put on earth to use his brain and muscles for the benefit of all and to develop his soul in the direction of what is good, and that which is good is that which makes others happy and enables us all to live in brotherhood and unity. If we accept this there is little reason for a man to worry what the world thinks of him. Though few of us can be great successes, very few indeed can be called "failures."

REDISTRIBUTION OF WEALTH

At a time when the contrast between the poor and the affluent is being thrown into sharp prominence, it is only to be expected that the question of a possible redistribution of wealth should once again be widely discussed. None the less, a great many enthusiastic people, who desire a reshuffling of this world's goods, allow their ideas to outrun their sense of what is really practical. Yet there really is an immense gap between the abstract belief that wealth should be more equitably distributed and the theory that the only way to do it is to take money directly out of the rich man's pocket and transfer it to the poor. Demagogues who like to present an easy formula to cure all social ills do not appear to see this. An American politician, whose reputation stands high in his country, has now come forward with a proposal for wealth redistribution by the simple process of a progressive federal inheritance tax. This, he points out, does not mean taking property from one man and giving it to another. It means taking money from the estates of the very wealthy, where it performs very little real service to humanity, and spending it in the interests of those at the bottom of the scale. It is contended that such a scheme would check steady, progressive concentration of wealth in the hands of a small class, and would also help materially to relieve the country of pauperism. Arguing that this would put redistribution forward in a fair way, the author of this plan points out that a man's right to profit by his industry or brilliance would not be infringed. Only his right to pile up an untouchable fortune for future generations would be reduced. It is of interest to keep in mind the fact, when considering this question, that America is one of the wealthiest countries in the world, if not the most wealthy, and yet one-third of its people are in beggary and want. Taxes already are abnormally heavy, and it is contended that the further taxation of those feeling the pinch is out of the question. Critics of the scheme mentioned argue that it would place an unfair burden on those who have, in many cases, by their own energies, amassed fortunes. But against this is the contention that the broadest

NOTES OF THE DAY

RUSSIA'S OPPORTUNITY

It is likely that the present Anglo-Russian conversations may prove of immense benefit to the cause of peace in Europe, and all the world, for that matter. For one thing the very apparent goodwill of the people of Moscow towards the British Minister who is conducting negotiations on behalf of His Majesty's Government, is an indication of the desire of Russians to make friends with a nation which is the very antithesis of all that the Soviet represents. Perhaps the personality of Mr. Anthony Eden has something to do with this; but it is not entirely responsible. Perhaps the Russian philosophy, by its very practicality, will overcome any antipathy towards the British imperialistic faith which may still remain rooted where the fathers of the revolution planted it. Let us hope that we shall see co-ordinated effort on the part of two great nations in the cause of peace; and that British common sense is equal to the Russian pragmatism, that there may be no hindrance to the work Mr. Eden has undertaken, because of prejudices on either side. There was much about the Russian revolution which was horrible and cruel and apparently unreasonable. But out of the blood and ashes of an ancient dynasty, the Soviet may produce that which will have a lasting and immense effect upon world politics; not, as the radical hopes, to be used to tear down the civilisations of other lands and spread world revolution; but to knit more firmly together in a prosperous democracy and peaceful enterprise the peoples of all colours, creeds and convictions.

Why has Italy mobilised an army and transported troops and war material to the Italian colonies adjacent to Abyssinia? The main facts of the situation have been fully reported in the Press. Some of the most important among these facts, however, are not well known to the general public.

How many people are aware that the Italian forces which took part in the armed conflict of December 5 were at Wal-Wal, which is marked on the British general staff sectional map (No. 2871) as being 60 miles within Abyssinian territory?

The British Commissioner in his reports from Wal-Wal speaks of the "provocative attitude adopted by the Italian authorities." He further declares that two Italian aeroplanes trained a machinegun and otherwise demonstrated over the heads of British and Abyssinian Commissioners (engaged in delimiting the frontier between Abyssinia and British Somaliland) in spite of the fact that the British were flying the Union Jack.

In its efforts to arrive at an equitable solution the British Mission was "constantly thwarted by the uncooperative and disobliging attitude of the Italian officer." The Abyssinian Mission also pointed out indignantly that such a procedure on the part of the agents of a Government with which Abyssinia had concluded a treaty of friendship was not in keeping with international usage.

It may well be that Italy has no real intention of annexing large slices of Abyssinian territory and that her main preoccupation is to protect the Italian colonies.

My own fairly recrue information is that the last thing Signor Mussolini desires is to be entangled in an awkward war from which no national credit can be won.

None knows better than he that a war, however efficiently planned in the mountainous and heavily wooded territory of Abyssinia, with its fierce tribes fighting for their freedom, would become a singularly bloody and long-drawn colonial struggle in which Italy's real difficulties would begin after she had won the campaign.

At a time when banking is held in such high repute, that is banking in private hands, it is almost fatal to its political advancement that Socialism should have chosen the moment to launch a campaign for nationalisation. The bankers have met this challenge by explaining to the public the real functions of the banks and the services they perform to the community. It is probably it is not more widespread than Mr. Beaumont Pease, of Lloyd's Bank, in answering the Socialistic argument quotes it first, as follows:

"How long are the people of this country to be divorced from the two thousand million pounds deposits in the hands of the banks?"

Mr. Pease says: "It is precisely in order to be sure that the rightful owners shall not be divorced from their two thousand millions that bankers in this country have kept their resources in a sufficiently liquid state to ensure their ability to pay their obligations when demanded. If the control over the deposits were put into the hands of some of those who wish to use it in order to enable them to finance their own particular projects, depositors might legitimately come to the conclusion that then, indeed, they had been divorced from their two thousand million pounds."

backs should bear the heaviest burden. Moreover, the estates of the wealthy are taxed far more heavily in Britain than they are in the United States.

There can be little question that a more just distribution of wealth is called for; the question arises whether this can be accomplished within the framework of traditional economic policy.

The danger is that if the problem is not dealt with in the manner likely to produce the least-evil results, more drastic and less equitable measures may eventually be found necessary.

It is likely that the present Anglo-Russian conversations may prove of immense benefit to the cause of peace in Europe, and all the world, for that matter. For one thing the very apparent goodwill of the people of Moscow towards the British Minister who is conducting negotiations on behalf of His Majesty's Government, is an indication of the desire of Russians to make friends with a nation which is the very antithesis of all that the Soviet represents. Mr. Beaumont Pease says: "It is precisely in order to be sure that the rightful owners shall not be divorced from their two thousand millions that bankers in this country have kept their resources in a sufficiently liquid state to ensure their ability to pay their obligations when demanded. If the control over the deposits were put into the hands of some of those who wish to use it in order to enable them to finance their own particular projects, depositors might legitimately come to the conclusion that then, indeed, they had been divorced from their two thousand million pounds."

backs should bear the heaviest burden. Moreover, the estates of the wealthy are taxed far more heavily in Britain than they are in the United States.

There can be little question that a more just distribution of wealth is called for; the question arises whether this can be accomplished within the framework of traditional economic policy.

The danger is that if the problem is not dealt with in the manner likely to produce the least-evil results, more drastic and less equitable measures may eventually be found necessary.

After all, they say, something must be done to uphold law and order among the warlike and undisciplined tribes which only nominally acknowledge Abyssinia's suzerainty; to thwart Italy would mean the ruin of European negotiations and probably Italy's withdrawal from the League; and on the whole it would be best to turn a blind eye to what Italy may choose to do.

Actually, the realists are Italy cannot allege the semblance of a grievance against Abyssinia. The only issue is the Wal-Wal incident itself, the blame for which has been ascribed by impartial British agents to Italy.

Italy is bound by an all-in arbitration treaty of 1928 which expressly covers the present incident. As lately as at the last meeting of the Council Italy undertook to act in the spirit of this treaty. Yet she has virtually presented more than one ultimatum, which she has supported by the dispatch of large bodies of troops.

While nominally accepting a neutral zone suggested by Great Britain, she has done nothing to set it up.

The Italian view, I know, is that there is no iniquity in these proceedings; that Wal-Wal was just a "regrettable incident"; that direct negotiations will settle the issue comfortably; that the dispatch of troops must be considered as an "expedition" and not as a movement of war; that, in order to ensure peace and order in the frontier zone, the Abyssinians must be made to realise that the Italian Army to-day is a different instrument from the Army of 40 years ago; and, finally, that Abyssinia is a barbarian land which ought not to be inside the League at all.

But the immediate charge against Italy is that the way in which she is now conducting the negotiations with Abyssinia, a senior member of the League, is a flagrant contravention of the letter and spirit of the Covenant.

The British Government should use all the influence it undoubtedly commands to persuade Signor Mussolini, who on many occasions has proved himself "a good European," to return to the path of wisdom and to take the initiative as he now can with no loss of prestige—in proposing a Commission, with an impartial personnel, to define a permanent frontier.

The Abyssinian Government, which wants a peaceful settlement, will make no difficulties about this solution. The British Government knows from its own agent where the responsibility lies. It cannot disregard the unpleasant fact that Italian munitions of war are being conveyed through the Suez Canal. The British Government therefore has a special responsibility.

It should have discovered by this time that a weak policy involving secret connivance at aggression never pays. It should

Belgian Money Muddle

HEAVY DRAIN ON NATIONAL BANK

Brussels, Mar. 30. The gold content of the Belgian will now be 150,632 grammes, it was announced to-day.

It is expected the new value will lead to heavy demands for currency, owing to the fact that there is a discount in foreign markets of between 12 and 15 per cent, whereas it is now discounted by 28 per cent. in Belgium.

Within the last six days the National Bank has lost through exports abroad 350,000,000 francs of gold.

The gold cover is now 56.7 per cent, and revaluation of the gold reserves will be made on the present reserves which are worth 11,293,000,000 francs at gold parity.—Reuter.

BRITISH FINANCIAL YEAR ENDS

SURPLUS ESTIMATE EXCEEDED

London, Mar. 30. Great Britain's financial year ended to-night and the returns issued by the Treasury reveal the satisfactory fact that surplus of revenue over expenditure amounts to £7,662,000.

The Chancellor of the exchequer in his budget speech last year forecast the revenue for the year £706,520,000 and expenditure at £705,724,000 with an estimated surplus of £790,000.

No provision was made in these figures for the payment of statutory sinking funds and authority was given in the Finance Act to borrow for these payments.

The accounts for the year show that revenue has exceeded the budget estimate at £9,921,000, a total of £716,441,000 having been realised. Expenditure at £708,879,000 is £3,155,000 more than the estimate and the realised surplus is thus £7,662,000.

Authority to borrow for sinking funds was not exercised and the figure for expenditure included £12,343,000 paid by means of sinking funds for the redemption of debt.

Thus the year's revenue has exceeded the year's expenditure other than on debt redemption by £19,005,000.

An item of Revenue that has most exceeded expectations is Income Tax. The Budget estimated an exchequer receipt of £219,500,000 and the amount realised is £228,877,000 an excess of £9,377,000 and only about £60,000 less than last year's receipts, notwithstanding a reduction in the standard rate of tax.

Surtax has produced £1,165,000 more than the estimate of £50,000,000 and Estate Duties at £81,366,000 are nearly £5,600,000 more than was expected.

On the other hand there is a shortage of nearly £1,000,000 on Stamps which were estimated at £25,000,000 and realised £24,110,000. The estimate for Customs and Excise was £290,000,000 and this figure has been almost exactly realised.

Post Office net receipt at £12,250,000 is £1,750,000 less than was expected, owing partly to the restoration of cuts and partly to recent reductions in telephone charges.

Receipt from Sundry Loans and Miscellaneous fell short of expectations by £4,303,000.

On the Expenditure side the charge for a national debt was fixed for the year at £224,000,000, which was estimated to be the amount required for interest and management. In fact it amounted to £211,687,000, thus leaving a margin of £12,343,000, which has been applied in the redemption of the National Debt, £9,000,000 being in respect of contractual sinking funds and the balance free sinking funds. The estimates for the supply services amounted to £462,000,000 and a further sum of £1,500,000 was provided for a partial restoration of the emergency cuts made during the 1931 crisis.

During the year supplementary estimates have been presented for £19,250,000 including this £7,260,000.

Thus the total of supply estimates for the year amounts to £489,000,000 and against this total Exchequer issues have amounted to £472,160,000. The floating debt now stands at £898,580,000 compared with £844,710,000 a year ago.—British Wireless.

A charity ball in aid of the widow of the late R.G.M.S. Francis, Royal Artillery, is being held in the Garrison Lecture Hall at 8 p.m. on April 1. Mrs. Francis has been left in reduced circumstances, and has three children, all under eight years of age, to support.

A successful Jumbo sale was held in the St. Andrew's Church Hall on Saturday when a total of over $100,000 was collected, in aid of the St. Andrew's Church Benevolent Society.

PRAYER AND LIFE IDEALS

The Bishop of Victoria preached at the evening service in St. John's Cathedral yesterday and discussed Christianity and Buddhism.

The Bishop said:

The well known picture of Jesus of Nazareth praying in the Garden of Gethsemane is strangely popular in the East. I have heard of it in the homes of non-Christian folk in India. The Indian people are drawn to this episode, this struggle in the life of Christ. I have myself seen it in many city and village homes in China. I have seen it even reproduced on china plates—artificially pathetic, but very significant.

This interest of the East in the agony of Gethsemane is significant because of its similarity and contrast with the figure of Buddha. Buddha is also represented in prayer. There is the similarity. But the contrast is greater than the similarity. The figure of Buddha is one of complete peace, both in body and in facial expression. There is no agony, no struggle. The seated Buddha is a picture of complete spiritual peace, harmony, victory.

As the East is drawn by the picture of Christ at prayer in the Garden, so many Western minds are attracted by the peaceful pose of Buddha and his way of devotion. East and West have much to learn from one another; God made the East as well as the West. We can help each other both in prayer and in life.

We can learn from Buddhism the technique of a poised and balanced personality; we can learn the importance of bodily position in praying; and we can learn how, by the proper control of breathing, and other purely physical actions, we can induce the right physical condition for a quiet mind.

It is not, perhaps, for us to say what we think the East can learn from us, by contrasting the poised figure of Buddha and the eager figure of Jesus in Gethsemane we can learn something of the relation between prayer and life.

"Abba Father, if it be possible, let this cup pass from me. Nevertheless not my will but thine be done."

Jesus does not pray to achieve a poised personality, but to find the power to do His Father's will.

"Hallowed by Thy name, Thy kingdom come, Thy will be done," are the secret of the eagerness, the life, the vitality, the directness in Christian prayer. It is the directness of obedience to the Father's will. Prayer and life are two sides of our co-operation with the Father.

The figure of Buddha at prayer is a picture of tranquillity, neither by a discipline of mind and body. The figure of Jesus in Gethsemane is not a picture of tranquillity. But it is a picture of obedience and of eager co-operation. Prayer and life are made one. Jesus of Nazareth is seeking by the rite of prayer not tranquillity for His soul, but to make His life an answer to the will of God.

Craftsmanship

Now I want you to come with me to any Buddhist temple in China. You will, I think, notice four things: The first, the beauty of the surroundings of the temple. The second, the beauty of the temple buildings. The third, the simple repose and strength of the figure of the Buddha himself.

The fourth, the great fantasticality of the other statues and pictures in the temple.

The last show how Buddhism has compromised, as in differing degrees in different countries, Christianity with folk-lore, superstitions, and other relics of animalism. The figure of Buddha himself is the earliest example of extra-territoriality in China. Except for certain facial infections from his Chinese surroundings he is still the superb Indian mystic of 600 years B.C. And the character of a beautiful position is given to the religious instinct of all people.

Of all these the most significant is the temple building itself. For here is something different both from the Indian Buddha and the fantastic other deities which are housed in the building. Here is something purely Chinese in its purity and sincerity, revealing the heart of the Chinese people. The purest religious expression of China is in the work of her craftsmen. One is reminded of that great verse in Ecclesiastes which sums up "the craftsman." Life by saying "They shall maintain the fabric of the world and in the hard work of their craft is their prayer."

Mr. A. G. Ploovannil, manager of the Hongkong Hotel, accompanied by Mrs. Ploovannil, left the Colony on board the President Polk, bound for the United States.

During his absence, Mr. O. A. Kaluzhny, the sub-manager, will act as manager.

Enough is not good enough for God. That is why Jesus is in agony in the Garden. Cost what it may, His life must be honest. He must not stop short with a life that will just do. He must obey to the last fraction of an inch the pattern he has laid up in the heart of God. It is in the heart of God that He discovers both the final pattern of His life, and the power to carry through all that it demands.

"Bound Apprentices"

What does this mean for you and me, for our own prayer and life?

If we are seeking tranquillity, we had best go the way of the Buddha and learn his technique for peace of mind and gentleness of spirit.

But if we are seeking the life of Jesus of Nazareth, we must go the way of the Buddha and to fulfil his life, the pattern he has laid up in the heart of God our Maker.

Or if this is our quest, we must follow Jesus' way. We must pray with our loins circled and our staff in our hand, ready at all costs to do the will of the unseen God.

This may mean an agony, a struggle, a conflict. It may mean a deep human cry, "Lead us not into temptation," or "If it be possible let this cup pass from me," or "Father save me from this hour." But always there will be a "nevertheless." Nevertheless not my will but Thine be done."

Your prayers may be dead and lifeless. There is one certain remedy for that. It lies in the "nevertheless." "Nevertheless not my will but Thine be done." The successful craftsman succeeds not by going his own way, but by the spirit of "nevertheless" not my will but Thine be done." By using the lessons of obedience and co-operation of Jesus in the Master Craftsman of life and the secret of His craft lies in His prayers. This Master Craftsman would bind us to His craft, the apprentices to learn His craft, the craft of human living.

At this point those who know anything of the work of skilled engineers, artisans, "tradesmen" as we call them, "journeymen" will understand what I am suggesting about prayer and life. Fancy-folks are no use in a work shop, for there everything must be thorough and honest. Something that just is not good enough is no good at all. So it is with life or religion; something that is just good will be good.

OBITUARY

SUDDEN DEMISE OF SIR A. STEEL-MAITLAND

London, March 31. The death is announced of Sir Arthur Steel-Maitland, Member of Parliament, who died suddenly while playing golf.—Reuter.

Sir Arthur Herbert Drummond Ramsay Steel-Maitland, statesman and specialist on Labour and poor law questions, was born in July, 1876, and educated at Rugby and Balliol College, Oxford, at both of which he gained distinction. In 1899 he rowed for Oxford in the annual boat-race against Cambridge and was President of the Union. He served in 1906 on the Royal Commission on the Poor Laws and was joint author of its report on the relation of industrial and housing conditions to pauperism. In 1910 he was elected Conservative M.P. for East Birmingham and a year later was made Chairman of the Unionist party organisation. He was appointed Under-Secretary for the Colonies in 1915, retaining the post when Lloyd George's Cabinet came into office in 1916. Next year he was made a baronet and appointed head of the Commercial Intelligence Department of the Board of Trade and also an additional Under-Secretary for Foreign Affairs. In 1919 he resigned these posts, but on the formation of the Baldwin Cabinet in 1924 he accepted office again being made Minister of Labour.

So far as the public were concerned little was known of Steel-Maitland's qualities up to that time. But in 1926 came a test which established his reputation. In that year occurred the great Labour upheaval following the dispute in the coal trade and Sir Arthur shared with Mr. Baldwin the responsibility for the negotiations which eventually ended successfully. In that crisis he proved to be cool in judgment and his unflinching courtesy made him liked even by the Labour leaders who were working against him. In the highly controversial matter of the "safeguarding" of industries by the imposition of duties on imports he took the view that there was no harm in such a course and that there was a case for revising the Free Trade policy in existing conditions.

In March 1929, he was placed in rather an embarrassing position at the meeting of the International Labour Office at Geneva. His proposals for the revision of the Washington Hours Convention were rejected by the workers' representatives and he only received the support of the employers. The result was that the revision scheme failed.

Sir Arthur was an hon. LL.D. of Edinburgh University. He has written a number of articles on social and political questions.

 Army—Rowlands; Swain and Steele; Keneghan, Morton and North; English, Sandford, Higgins, Ridley, and Baldry.

Albert Howe, scoring three very clever goals, beat the Army and retained the Lai Wah Cup for the Civilians on Saturday, when the teams contested the final under deplorable conditions. The result rested on Howe's finishing; it was this which left the Army a defeated team, for so far as the game went, there was practically nothing to choose between the sides.

The Army had an equal share of the exchanges and at intervals were more dangerous on the attack than the Civilians. Their forwards, however, fell away later in the second half and rarely bothered the keeper.

A continuous rain and a ground already made difficult by rain did not tend to lift the football to a high standard, and under the circumstances the play was performed with distinct crudity. Practically everything depended on the speed and accuracy with which the ball was transferred from one player to the other and in this respect the Civilians earned chief honours.

IMPOSING MOVEMENTS

There were times when the forwards swept up the field in imposing style the ball moving rapidly from wing to wing and allowing the Army defenders but little time to position themselves. It was by such methods that the Civilians scored their four goals.

Howe missed something like a dozen opportunities through lack of ball control, but his three goals showed the Army's centre-forward at his best. The third point was a magnificent effort, Howe slipping across to the left side of the field and shooting first time on the turn from

NEW RULES TO KILL "BODYLINE"

Orders To Umpires

"DEAD BALL" AT 3RD OFFENCE

London, Mar. 7.

In its attack on "bodyline" bowling the M.C.C. have drawn up rules for umpires for the coming season—and, of course, given the hard-worked umpires more than ever to do.

After deciding upon these, a sub-committee of the M.C.C. called first-class umpires to a conference and submitted the proposals to them.

These rules, which will be further considered by the M.C.C. on Monday, are understood to give a player who bowls "bodyline" three chances before action is taken against him in the field. This action will be as follows:

First bodyline ball; bowler warned by umpire.

Second bodyline ball; umpire speaks to captain.

Third bodyline ball; umpire calls "dead ball"; bowler withdrawn for rest of innings.

A SPOT OF BOTHER

What will happen if a batsman is bowled or caught from the second "body-line" delivery? An umpire yesterday replied to this question: "He will be out, I suppose. That is one of the little things which are going to bother us next season."

A point that is giving concern to umpires is the time that may elapse before the bowler is "pulled up."

The M.C.C., however, consider that the knowledge that the rule is in existence will prove a sufficient deterrent, and will probably prevent "direct attack" bowling being even attempted.

UMPIRES AND L.B.W.

The umpires have themselves taken a hand to provide "brighter" cricket. They have expressed their view that the "snick" l.b.w. rule which was dropped last season should be restored. The matter was fully considered at the conference.

A well-known umpire said: "We umpires want to combine the old 'snick' rule with the new l.b.w. rule. That would mean that if a batsman snicked a ball even a foot outside his off-stump, and it struck his leg in line between wicket and wicket, he would be out."

PILE'S INTERCEPTIONS

Brilliant interceptions featured a thoroughly good display by Chris Pile at right back, and the manner in which he adapted himself to a strange position was commendable.

There was not a real weakness in the Civilians' team, although some of the players were unable to adapt themselves to the conditions so well as others and accordingly were not so prominent.

Higgins was the most entertaining performer in the Army Eleven, the energetic centre-forward accomplishing a lot of hard and useful work against a sound defence. He was certainly more dangerous than any of the other forwards.

Hodger, however, but was not always well supported. Both Baldry and Sandford nullified Hodger's creative labours by slowness or bad finishing. Apart from scoring a good goal Sandford was not a success, while Baldry and English were far too well watched by the opposition half backs to contribute anything much to the game.

Morton did not find his feet until the second half, when he came into his own by keeping Howe in check. Keneghan was mediocre against the Blackford and A. V. Gossano combination.

TWO SOCCER TITLES DECIDED

Interest In Game Now On The Wane

(By "Veritas")

WITH the Lai Wah Cup concluded W. and two championship titles in the hands of the Civilians, interest in local football is beginning to wane. The important games now outstanding are the International Charly Cup final, the Governor's Cup deciding match and the Kotewall Charity Cup engagements.

BURSTS OF fire-crackers greeted

South China's victory at Sookpukoo yesterday signalling the winning of the first division championship.

There was no such demonstration in the more subtle arts of the game and were so completely dominant in midfield that any other result but a decisive win seemed out of the question. But to repeat that trust of all football triumps, "It's goals that count," and when a team refuses to score goals from ideal positions, then defeat must be expected.

THE Fusiliers' reply confirmed the impression that in many respects they are one of the best teams in local football. They were well above the Navy in the more subtle arts of the game and were so completely dominant in midfield that any other result but a decisive win seemed out of the question. But to repeat that trust of all football triumps, "It's goals that count," and when a team refuses to score goals from ideal positions, then

defeat must be expected.

ALL the same there is no more incorrect reflection of a team's performances and potentialities than the Fusiliers' league record which shows five wins, five draws and six defeats in 16 matches.

FRIENDLY CRICKET

Hongkong C.C. Beat K.C.C. By Seven Wickets

By Seven Wickets

In a friendly cricket match played on the Kowloon C.C. ground at Kowloon Park yesterday, the Hongkong C.C. defeated the home team by seven wickets. Batting first, Kowloon were all out for 100 despite a gallant knock for 40 by E. C. Fincher. C. Hill-Wood did most of the damage, claiming six victims for 41 runs. T. A. Pearce captured three wickets well placed, and require only to win their last match to supersede the Lincolns who at present hold that position.

THERE was a much improved atmosphere about the football this

last week-end. The Lai Wah Cup

game was played in the best of spirit,

and beyond technical faults there was nothing to mar yesterday's match at Sookpukoo. But while local games were played in pence and goodwill

Shanghai saw an ugly affair at the Stadium when a riot broke out during the match between Tung Hwa and the Police. It was a far more serious thing than that which happened at Sookpukoo the other day. The crowd because much out of hand that several people were injured and only by rushing up a riot squad was it possible to quell the flaring tempers.

THIS is but another illustration of the privileges of competitive football being abused, and the Shanghai

F.A. appear to be in the same quandary as the Hongkong Association so far as finding means to deal with the problem.

HOWE'S THREE GOALS DO THE TRICK

THWARTS ARMY'S LAI WAH CUP ASPIRATIONS

South China Had To Fight Hard

The introduction of Chan Tak-fai into the forward line was a big success, this young player performing very creditably. He concentrated on creating openings for his colleagues and in this respect did more valuable work than if he had gone for goals.

Tam Kong-pak and Ip Pak-wa played well enough to demand careful watching, and but for Ash they would probably have netted a number of goals. Tam completed an afternoon of sound and intelligent football by converting the penalty which put South China on level terms and then heading in the winning goal in infinite style.

The game was played at a fast pace, and although the somewhat slippery surface of the ground occasionally defeated the players in their efforts to keep the ball moving quickly, the first half exchanges were notable for many brilliant movements by both sets of forwards.

RIDLEY OUTWITS DEFENCE

It was Ridley who, receiving in his own half, side-stepped his way past three opponents and then delivered the ball to Higgins with an ideal through pass, which the centre-forward collected in his stride and beat Wong Wing with a ground shot.

The Lincoln thoroughly deserved the lead, but they did not keep it for longer than two minutes, the Chinese sweeping down for Chan Tak-fai to beat Head after the ball had hit the cross-bar.

The Chinese twice went very close to scoring again after this, Tso Kwai-shing, making Head save brilliantly from a fierce drive, while the goalkeeper cleverly fisted over a cunning shot by Ip Pak-wa.

But it was the Lincolns who went ahead again and once more it was through Ridley, who slammed in a perfect shot from 20 yards range, Wong Wing being completely beaten.

This slender advantage was held until the interval, and with the Lincolns holding their own very well in defence there was a distinct prospect of South China suffering their first league defeat of the season. Then calamity fell on the soldiers. Robson handled in the penalty area, Tam Kong-pak made no mistake from the 'pen kick' and shortly afterwards Edmiston fouled Tso a little distance from the corner flag.

CHANCES MISSED

The outside right placed an ideal centre into the goalmouth and Tam's head did the rest. After this the Lincolns were the better out of the pictures, Ridley could not get going again and Higgins was also too well shadowed to find opportunities for those quick dashes through the defence. Both English and McGinness had chances, but they were too slow, insisting upon getting the ball under complete control before attempting to shoot; the quick moving Chinese defenders were thus able to clear with ease. Ridley also made a bad blunder towards the close and on the whole the Lincolns had no cause to complain about the result.

SERIAL STORY

SILKEN SPINDLES

by Laura Lou Brockman

CHAPTER XXX

Gale drew back, staring at Brian Westmore. She said, "I shouldn't have come."

"His hand on her arm tightened almost roughly. "Don't!" he said. "You don't understand. I love you, Gale."

"But you can't! You mustn't say that!"

"Why not?"
"Because you—mustn't."

Brian laughed. "That's not like you, Gale. You know that's no reason at all. It's—" he paused suddenly, and then went on in a dulled tone, "Oh, I guess I understand. You mean you're not in love with me. In that it? There's someone else?"

Only the night before Gale had heard those words. "Someone else," Steve had said them. And she had assured him that there was no one else with whom she was in love. She had told him she was never going to see Brian Westmore again. She couldn't be in love with him. And here he was waiting, watching her with that hurt, anxious look in his face.

She said, "It's not that."
"Then what is it, Darling?"

Her heart beat a mad tattoo. "I'll always have this to remember," Gale thought. "I'll always remember he called me 'Darling'." She looked up, and said, "You know it's impossible. You and I can't be in love with each other."

"But that's nonsense. I think I've been in love with you from the very first time I saw you. Does that surprise you? Well, perhaps it does. It surprises me, too. I didn't know— I didn't realize until a minute ago, but oh, I've been crazy about you all along!"

He would have taken her in his arms again but she drew back. "You keep forgetting so much," Gale told him. "You forget you're Brian Westmore and I'm—just a girl who works in the mill."

"You're just the most wonderful girl in the world; that's what you

Gale smiled. What girl wouldn't, with Brian looking at her like that? "Well," she said, "the most wonderful girl in the world wants to go home."

"Not now. I tell you I'm in love with you, girl. I want to turn cartwheels and dance in the streets. Oh, Gale, you are so sweet! You've done something to me, do you know that? Hypnotized me, put me under a spell. I haven't been thinking about anything for days except when I was to see you again. You can't let me go away from you now on, on the way you have been. You've got to let me take you places, got to let me come to see you."

"I'll let you," she promised, surprised at herself, "but we really must go now."

"Want to get rid of me, don't you?"
She smiled, "No, it's not that."
"Maybe—"

It was as much of an admission as he could coax from her, and he had to be satisfied with it.

They started back along the path. It was narrow, hardly wide enough for one-in some places. Gale walked a few steps ahead and Brian followed, talking eagerly. Most of the time, the girl did not trust herself to answer. Once she looked back and Brian said something about her eyes being brighter than the stars. He said a good many extravagant, delightful things.

After a while Gale asked, "Brian, didn't you say there was a short cut?"

"Yes, we'll come to it in a few minutes. Take the turn to your left. See here, you said we hadn't found any treasure to-day. You were wrong. I've discovered the sweetest, most precious thing in all the world! Of course I brought my treasure with me!"

They reached the short cut and presently turned in to the open road. Walking along the highway, back in the everyday world, their conversation took a more matter-of-fact turn.

Brian talked about the new advertising campaign the mill was going to launch. It was ambitious, expensive, but it was sure to widen the mill's market. Brian described one of the advertisements in detail.

"What do you think of it?" he asked. "I think it will appeal to women? They're the buyers, you know. They're the ones we're trying to get interested. We want them to recognize the Westmore label and ask for it."

"Then don't you think there should be a picture of the label in the advertisement? Large enough so everyone who sees it will know what it is?"

"By George, you're right! You're absolutely right about it. I'll speak to Perkins in the morning."

They had reached the crossing of two main highways. A car was coming toward them and Gale and Brian had stopped, waiting for it to pass. It was a roadster, driven by a youth who was hatless. There was a girl beside him and another couple in the rumble seat. The car was coming at terrific speed. As it rushed past there was a shout and an arm raised in greeting.

"Who was that?" Gale asked.

"Wally Carter. Some day he'll get into trouble, driving the way he does."

Gale knew who Wally Carter was.

The nephew of Josiah Carter, president of the Citizens' National Bank. Wally Carter was one of Brian's friends just as Vicki Thatcher and her crowd were. Suddenly Gale saw again the deep chasm that lay between them—Brian and his friends on one side, she and the rest of the mill workers on the other. She had almost forgotten for a little while; it was pleasant to forget. But she mustn't do it again. The chasm was still there. No matter what Brian said it wasn't changed.

Or was it? Could it be? Westmore had built the mill, built the town. Could Brian Westmore have wanted to sweep away social distinctions? Could he? Her heart quickened at the thought.

She said, "Brian, I wish you wouldn't come any farther with me. I'd rather go on alone."

"But why?"

"She considered, "Does there need to be a reason?"

"No—not if you'd rather have it that way. But when am I going to see you again. To-morrow?"

"To-morrow."

"Tuesday?"

Gale considered. "Yes," she said. "I think Tuesday will be all right."

"I'll be there," he assured her. She said goodbye and hurried away before he could say anything more.

There was so much to be thought about, so much to be planned and decided, and her thoughts refused to be orderly. Everything had been changed by those three words Brian had said.

"I love you."

He had said it, though she couldn't believe it, yet. He'd called her "Darling," too, and said, "You're so sweet."

Gale wanted to cuddle the words in her hand, to cherish them and keep them where nothing could possibly harm them or take away their magic. Brian Westmore was in love with her.

She thought, "How can I keep everyone from knowing? They'll see it in my face. I must look different. No, I could feel like this and not show it."

And Brian had thought she didn't care for him. Dear, foolish Brian. He had asked if there was someone else.

A shadow crossed the girl's happiness. Steve would be hurt when she told him. She didn't want to hurt Steve but what other way was there? He'd have to know.

She walked more slowly. Dusk had fallen by the time she reached the house. She remembered, just before she opened the door, that Steve was coming tonight.

At the Country Club an hour later Brian Westmore joined the group before the fireplace. Vicki Thatcher looked up from the depths of an overstuffed chair. She drawled, "So you got here, Darling. I was beginning to think something had happened."

Brian dropped beside her. "Hope you haven't been waiting," he said. "It didn't know it was late."

"It isn't—not nearly late enough." A young man appeared at the doorway and someone called "Hi, Wally!" The young man came forward. He saw Brian and grinned and said, "Say, how do you do?" Always beside the prettiest girl in the room. By the way, Brian, who was that snappy number I saw you with this afternoon?"

A striking cast was assembled for this picture: Matheson Lang, Constance Cummings, Edmund Gwenn, Anthony Bushell, Dorothy Dickson, Nigel Bruce, Douglas Jeffries and Max Miller. The story by Angus MacPhail and W. P. Linkom concerns the affairs of Van Eeden, a famous financier, played by Matheson Lang. Cleverly interspersed with drama are comedy scenes, put across by that master of buffoonery, Max Miller, in the role of a wise-cracking commercial traveller.

"Broadway Bill"

The eagerly awaited premiere of Columbia's "Broadway Bill" took place on Saturday at the Queen's Theatre.

Coming from the Columbia showshop on the heels of such memorable produc-ctions as "Lady for a Day," "It Happened One Night" and "Broadway Bill," it will be a worthy successor to this triumphant array of screen hits. Warner Baxter and Myrna Loy are co-starred with Walter Connolly, Helen Vinson, Lynne Overman, while Clarence Muse is in the supporting cast. Directed by Frank Capra from a script prepared by Robert Riskin, "Broadway Bill" is a romantic comedy in which Baxter plays a reckless, lovable roué.

Miss Loy is a horse-loving, feminine counterpart of him. The plot gives this clever actress a fine dramatic opportunity and something entirely different from "The Thin

Man" and other parts she has played lately. Both Baxter and Miss Loy's acting abilities are employed in a series of episodes full of humour which, while furthering the plot of the story, provide entertainment which

CONTRACT BRIDGE

By W. E. McKenney

Towie, a new kind of bridge for three or more players, is the latest fad in social circles in America. Here is the first of three articles, by William E. McKenney, bridge authority, telling you how the game is played. You'll find Towie an interesting diversion from contract bridge.

No longer will you have to look for a fourth hand to make up a game, nor will you be bothered by kibitzers. For a new sort of contract bridge called "Towie" has come to rescue you from these difficulties.

Towie really is a three-handed bridge game, one at which every player pays for his own mistakes and is all for himself, as far as bidding is concerned. And when he becomes declarer and makes his contract, he receives all the profit.

Towie is not a game for the timid player. It is an offensive game and only players willing to bid and gamble can hope to win. Towie was introduced by J. Leonard Reagle. The best book on Towie to-day is entitled "Towie" by William J. Huske. It costs $1.

How to Score

The scoring for Towie is: Major suits, 30; minor suits, 20; no trump, 36.

Each overtrick, regardless of the contract, gets 60 points, not vulnerable and not doubled. When doubled and not vulnerable, 100 points; doubled, vulnerable, 200 points; undoubled, vulnerable, 100 points.

A bonus is also given for fulfilling a doubled contract. It is 60 points, not vulnerable, and 100 points, vulnerable.

Undertrick penalties are as follows:

Not Vulnerable Undoubled Doubled

1st trick 50 100

2nd trick 50 100

3rd trick 50 200

4th trick 50 200

5th trick 50 400

Vulnerable Undoubled Doubled

1st trick 100 200

2nd trick 200 400

3rd trick 200 400

4th trick 200 400

5th trick 200 400

Each additional doubled undertrick, whether or not the player is vulnerable, is scored at 400 points. Only honours and penalties are scored above the line.

Premiums Are High

Honours are scored as in contract: Four trump honours in one hand, 100; five trump honours in one hand, 150, and at no trump four aces in one hand, 160.

When a player is not vulnerable and makes a game, he receives a bonus of 600 points in addition to his contract score, and when he is vulnerable and scores another game he receives bonus of 1,000 points in addition to his contract score. This ends the rubber.

The premiums for slams mind are: Small Slam, not vulnerable, 600 points; vulnerable, 750 points. Grand Slam not vulnerable, 1,000 points; vulnerable, 1,500 points.

In playing Towie for money, one should greatly reduce the stakes played for at contract. The reduction should be about three to one, because in Towie when you lose you pay every other player.

CHARITY BALL HELD

FUNDS RAISED FOR NEW CHILDREN'S CLINIC

The charity ball held at the Hotel Cecil on Saturday night under the distinguished patronage of His Excellency the Governor, Sir William Peel, and presided over by the Hon. Sir Shou-son Chow, (President), was a great success, there being a large gathering present.

The ball was held in aid of the Children's Hospital and Clinic, Kowloon, which is accommodated temporarily at the Precious Blood Convent. The institution gives invaluable service for the poor children of the Chinese working class.

With tasteful decoration of streamers, balloons and flowers all along the pillars, the dining hall presented a beautiful scene, while the harmonious musical selections provided in the programme were another feature of attractions to the guests. By a band of charming young ladies acting as members of the ball committee, sweets, toys and ice cream were served and disposed among the joyful gathering.

Chairman's Speech

In the course of his opening address, Mr. R. C. H. Lim, Chairman, said.—"I do hope and pray that the various clubs in Hongkong who have the means of helping this hospital, to do so—particularly the various athletic clubs. The hospital has not been in existence for more than a few years and the work it is doing is being done quietly but well and with marvellous results. Several doctors both Chinese and foreign are giving their services gratis and they together with the Sisters of the Convent are doing their utmost to meet the need of the poor population of Kowloon in battling to put down the very high rate of infant mortality.

"At present, the only available space is that part of the Convent Building which as a great sacrifice of inconvenience the Chinese Sisters of the Precious Blood, allotted for the purpose of the Hospital and Clinic.

"Some time last year, His Excellency the Governor, Sir William Peel, graciously approved a plot of land near where the Convent now is for the purpose of building a new hospital for children. It is, I learn, for this purpose that the committee of the hospital, headed by Mr. Tse Yung-kwong, is attempting to raise the sum of $40,000 for the cost of the building. So far, I understand, nearly $15,000 has been collected and deposited in the Mercantile Bank.

Mr. Lim expressed thanks to His Excellency the Governor for his interest in the welfare of the hospital, which they hoped one day to build into an institution worthy of Hongkong. He also thanked the Hon. Sir Shou-son Chow for all the work he had done and the management of the Hotel Cecil for their kind assistance in arranging the function.

Mr. Lim concluded by expressing thanks to Mr. Tse Yung-kwong for his many generous acts and particularly for his donations of $100 to defray part of the cost of the orchestra.

Thanks were also tendered to local firms for gifts.

The Committee, and particularly the hardworking Secretaries and Treasurer, the Misses Adele Lee, Maisie Chui and Grace Au Young, deserved thanks, also Mr. W. C. Chan, the Manager of the Hotel Cecil, the prime mover of the function.

Afterwards Mrs. R. C. H. Lim was asked to distribute the silver cups and medals to all the lady workers who had made the function such a great success.

RABIES VICTIM

MR. J. ELPHINSTONE SUCCUMBS

The shocking statement that a European, Mr. J. A. M. Elphinstone, during the week-end had admitted to the Kowloon Hospital, a victim to rabies, was followed by the sad announcement yesterday that he had succumbed to the dread disease.

Mr. Elphinstone died at 3 a.m. yesterday, after everything humanly possible had been done to alleviate his intense sufferings. The fact was also disclosed that on February 26 Mr. Elphinstone was at the Dogs' Home to make a purchase on behalf of his father, who had written to him from Formosa, and that whilst there he was bitten by a dog which the following day had to be destroyed.

Only 25 years of age, the late Mr. James Alfred Montague Elphinstone was the only child of Mr. S. Elphinstone, a prominent merchant and mine-owner of Kobe, Japan. He came to Hongkong when a boy, and was first educated at the Diocesan Boys' School. In 1923 he proceeded to England where he received his later education at the Shoreham Grammar School (Brighton). Finally, he went to the Automobile Engineering College of London, from which he graduated with diploma. While in England he was under the guardianship of Mr. D. O. da Silva, of the Sun Life Assurance Co. of Canada.

On returning to Hongkong, Mr. Elphinstone joined Messrs. Wallace Harper and Co., Ltd. later going into business on his own account. For over a year he was the proprietor of the Service Company, and managed a garage and service station at Ashley Road, Kowloon, but at the end of that period sold the business. Recently, he joined the Advertising and Publicity Bureau, Ltd., with whom he remained until December last.

He was a member of the Flying Squad of the Hongkong Police Reserve.

The funeral takes place to-day at the Catholic Cemetery, the cortège passing the Monument at 5.30 p.m.

ANGLO-RUSSIAN ACCORD NATIONS UNITE IN PEACE QUEST

SEEK TO DRAW GERMANY INTO SECURITY PACT

Moscow, April 1.

The Anglo-Russian conversations have resulted in a plan for co-operation in the cause of peace on the part of the two Governments concerned, according to a communique issued by the Soviet Government to-day.

With the departure of Mr. Anthony Eden, the British Lord Privy Seal, who is now on his way to Warsaw, the communique was issued. It says that the conversations between him and M. Maxim Litvinoff, the Commissar for Foreign Affairs, dealt with the principle elements of the international situation, including the proposed Eastern Locarno Pact, and the other questions set forth in the Anglo-French communique of February 3.

The communique also drew attention to further developments and improvements in Anglo-Soviet relations.

Mr. Eden, it is stated, also exchanged views with M. Stalin, virtual dictator of Russia, and M. Molotov, principal lieutenant of the Soviet chief.

In the course of the conversations, which were conducted throughout in an atmosphere of complete friendliness and frankness, Mr. Eden informed M. Litvinoff upon the Anglo-German talks, just concluded. He agreed that these had helped to clarify the European situation.

With the British Minister's views, that in the present international situation it is more than ever necessary to pursue and endeavour to promote the building up of a system of collective security in Europe, as contemplated in the Anglo-French communique of February 3, MM. Stalin, Molotov and Litvinoff all agree. They agree, too, upon the necessity for conforming with the principles on which the League of Nations is based.

ORGANISED SECURITY

The communique states that both M. Stalin, M. Molotov and M. Litvinoff emphasised the need of organisation of security for Eastern Europe, and declared that the proposed pact of mutual assistance was not aimed either at isolation or encirclement of any state, but at the creation of equal security for all the participants. Therefore, in the Russian view, participation in such a pact of both Germany and Poland would be welcomed, as affording the best solution to the problem of security.

The representatives of British and Russian Governments were happy to note as the result of the full and frank exchange of views, that there was at present no conflict of interests between the two nations on any of the main issues of international policy. Thus, they believe, provides a firm foundation for the development of their fruitful collaboration in the cause of peace.

ADVANTAGES OF PEACE

Each Government is confident that the other will recognise that the integrity and prosperity of peace is advantageous, and in so doing will govern their mutual relations in a spirit of collaboration and loyalty to their obligations as members of the League.

In view of these considerations, Mr. Eden and MM. Stalin, Molotov and Litvinoff are of the confirmed opinion that friendly co-operation between the two countries in the general work for the collective organisation of peace and security is of primary importance for the furtherance of the international efforts to this end.—Reuter.

He thus broke the old unofficial record set by C. J. Melrose, the young Australian flier, by thirteen hours ten minutes. Melrose, last September, flew from Australia to England in eight days nine hours.

Both Melrose and Brooke were entered in the England to Australia Air Derby last year. On that occasion Melrose won the solo prize and Brooke took 26 days 20 hours for the passage to Port Darwin.

Brooke was to-day flying a new type of Miles Hawk machine, one of the speediest and stillest of modern models.—Reuter Special.

A gang leader's love of noodles resulted to-day in the round-up of five forgers and the seizure of millions of yen in forged Government bonds.

The gang chief, Hisa Ohonda, had eluded the police for three years, although his face and record was known to them. He had been wearing a false beard all this while and mixing freely about the city, it transpires.

But he removed the false beard while in a restaurant last night in order to more comfortably eat dish of steaming, fragrant noodles. Somebody recognised him.

A few minutes later Ohonda was in police custody and to-day his confederates, and their stock of spurious bonds, were also under lock and key.—United Press.

Twenty-three persons were drowned to-day when a violent cyclone swept the western coast of the Adriatic Sea.

Immense waves overwhelmed and sank a number of fishing boats and much damage to property resulted from the furious wind. Sea side dwellings were in some places demolished.

Twenty fishing boats, with fifty men aboard, are still missing. It is hoped they have made shelter in some out-of-the-way place, which will account for their not having communicated with their base as yet.

As a result of the gale there was a phenomenally low tide in Venice, causing many of the canals to run dry and resulting in much inconvenience.—Reuter Special.

DISPUTE WITH ITALY

Geneva, March 30.

The Abyssinian Government, having broken off direct negotiations with Rome over the Italian-Somaliland frontier dispute, has addressed a fresh communication to the League of Nations.

The message states that with regard to the dispute with Italy it wished the Council to take up its appeal under Article XV without delay.

Earlier Rome despatches stated that while Abyssinia's demands seemed to indicate that a Commission of Arbitration might be appointed, it was always very doubtful if any such body could be acceptable to both Italy and Abyssinia, and whose decisions would be respected as being final.

Italian troops, meanwhile, have been hurried to North Africa and are prepared for any eventuality, while for some time past Abyssinia has been mobilising her fighting men to meet a possible encroachment on her territory.—Reuter.

COLDEST APRIL DAY FOR YEARS

CHILL SPELL MAY LAST TWO DAYS

The cold snap which Hongkong is at present experiencing is most unusual for this time of the year.

This morning at 7 o'clock, the Royal Observatory registered a temperature of 57 degrees, which is the lowest recorded for any April since 1926. In that year, a temperature of 56.4 was registered on April 9.

The lowest April temperature ever recorded in Hongkong was 51.8 in 1926.

Actually, it was colder last night than in the early hours of this morning for at 8 p.m. a temperature of 56.6 was recorded at the Observatory.

Observatory officials expect the cold snap to continue for another two days at least.

Mr. Hiram Parkes Wilkinson, K.C., who had long been associated with British affairs in the Far East and who had served in many different capacities, died to-day with the colours.

The classes of 1901 to 1909 will be trained in short service periods, not exceeding eight weeks, in the course of the next few years;

The 1901 class will be called up on October 1, and another batch of the later class will be summoned to service on April 1, 1936.

Selection will be severe and extensive consideration will be given to married and professional men.

It is now thought that the German armed forces will reach 750,000 men.

Preparations for the accommodation of the new army are well advanced.

The new defence law will announce the creation of a National Defence Council, in which the famous strategist Field Marshal Erich Friedrich Wilhelm Ludendorff and General Hans von Seeckt, former Chief of the Army and in charge of re-organisation of the Reichswehr in 1920-22, will be most influential members.

During the War Field Marshal Ludendorff was Chief of Staff to Field Marshal von Hindenburg. General von Seeckt was Chief of Staff to the Third Army during the War and was, until recently military adviser to General Chiang Kai-shek.—Reuter.

PREPARATION FOR CONFLICT

GERMANY READY BY NEXT MARCH

BUILDING UP GIGANTIC STOCKS FOR WAR

(By Telegraph. Copyright, Telegraphic

1, 10.30 a.m.)

Geneva, March 30.

A canvass of the Disarmament Conference military attaches has revealed the consensus of opinion that Germany will be ready for a major war by next March.

It is baldly stated here that the German War Ministry began large scale military production last October from blueprints prepared a long time before. At present the Government is building and assembling gigantic stocks of war materials of all sorts.

Including the regular army pilots and the reserve, it is estimated that Germany has 3,300 flying men, perfectly trained, compared to the 2,200 which Great Britain can put into the air, and the 5,000 which France has available.

French authorities state that the Germans lack bombers at the moment, but that they are building a very superior type as rapidly as possible, and that that is regarded as a serious affair.—United Press.

HUGE SUM NEEDED

Berlin, March 30.

In view of the enormous sum required for the Army and Navy, the German Finance Ministry announced to-day that it was wracking its brains to find a means to balance the budget.

In order to enable the country to carry on, meanwhile, a special law has been promulgated authorising, among other things, that the Minister of Finance should assume certain guarantees, ample for the promotion of Germany's export trade, and that up to 20,000,000 marks be made available for this purpose.

Up to 100,000,000 marks will be allowed for work creating purposes and up to 88,000,000 to assist agriculture.—Reuter.

LETTERS
EVE.

I must tell you the most priceless joke . . . something in the nature of a faux pas. Last night, our new Manager and his wife dropped in for a chat, and she is really a sweet little thing. She and I were discussing various domestic and other problems, and happened to get on to the question of shoes. I told her that there was no need to worry about that sort of thing out here, because Gordon's are so thoroughly reliable and up-to-date. While we were chinwagging away, Bungo was doing his best with the Taipan . . . such a cheery soul . . . and whether he was only dropping a hint or not, I cannot for the life of me say . . . but evidently he overheard me use the name "Gordon's" . . . and thereupon interjected with the remark . . . "I don't mind if I do!" Of course, it was extremely tactful, because we were just wondering whether to offer cocktails or not. They stayed on to pot-luck and we quite enjoyed ourselves. By the way, I've decided to go in for Gordon's instalment plan . . . a really fine way of making the budget cover shoe items. When it becomes generally known everybody will be doing it.

IN SHIPS

By LEE BRACE

After nearly two score years experience I can say quite truthfully that life at sea to-day is dull and monotonous. It was different, certainly, in the days of sailing ships, but the modern steamer has completely altered things.

Small boys will not believe this. For them the sea still spells romance. Older folks, especially those who have someone at sea, will not believe it either. To them every puff of wind is half a gale, and every gale what they firmly believe to be a storm. When the wind howls round the chimney pots and windows rattle in their frames, they are concerned for their folk at sea. Quite apart from the fact that the ship to which their thoughts fly may at that particular moment be loaing along in a flat calm in the Tropics, they quite wrongly imagine that wind inevitably means danger.

In a well-found ship bad weather, even what the sailor terms bad weather, means discomfort rather than danger. Danger and disaster are usually the result of defects to rudder, propeller, or machinery—anything that prevents the ship being kept under proper control. Only in such circumstances is bad weather really dangerous.

NOTHING TO WORRY ABOUT

Since I first went to sea nearly 40 years ago I have only encountered two storms (using the word properly), although I have been through many a gale. But, as I have said, a gale is nothing to worry about, and against such weather must be weighed months and months of fine weather.

This, however, was not quite the side of seafaring to which I referred when I took up the title the bald statement that life at sea is dull. What I was thinking of is the normal life, and not the odd happenings which make front page news, although they affect but a fraction of one per cent. of the ship at sea.

Let me draw aside the veil of romance and reveal the sea life for what it is, an everyday job of work that offers little in the way of variety, but more often than not dull monotony, and which necessarily robs its followers of the wider and much more interesting life open to those who live and work ashore.

One at least sees the world. Who was it said with deadly truth, "A sailor is one who visits all countries and sees none?" The arrival in a foreign port is merely the signal for cargo work. Down the hold all day, tallying cargo; guarding against pilfering or keeping watch to see that only the proper packages are discharged. Night work is by no means uncommon. An odd evening ashore, and with luck a whole Sunday. It does not sound very thrilling, does it?

BURDEN OF LEISURE

What of the time actually at sea? Two spells of four hours each on the bridge, and the rest of the time is your own. Or some of it at least, for there are other odds and ends of duties besides actual watch-keeping. But you do have leisure. The trouble is what to do with it. The same few yarns. No change, no relief. Day after day the same old thing. A voyage may last two years with the same half-dozen shipmates.

On the bridge, occasional sights, an occasional azimuth, and a circle of horizon around you. Back and forth across the bridge you pad, your thoughts for com-

"Coat and Skirt Vogue Returns". At most smart gatherings there are as many three-quarter length coats as there are short ones. The suit sketched was made of smooth light tweed with hairs woven into the surface.

LEeks WITH WHITE SAUCE

HERE is a delicious way of serving leeks. Choose thick white ones, and cut off most of the green tails—do not throw them away, as they will do for broth. Tie the leeks into bundles of 3 or 4 with narrow white tape, and boil till tender. Drain them very thoroughly of water; this is important, as, otherwise, they will be very sodden. While they are cooking, make some white sauce—one oz. butter melted in a small pan, one oz. flour stirred in, and $\frac{1}{2}$ pint of milk added gradually; stir all the time the sauce boils—eight minutes. Remove the tape from the leeks, place each little bundle on a large slice of hot buttered toast, and pour the white sauce over them.

pany. What are you there for? Just waiting. You do not even have the satisfaction of feeling that you are doing something. Nothing ever happens, or at least it happens so seldom that it amounts to the same thing. But because it may happen, it is absolutely essential that you keep a bright lookout and . . . pad back and forth, back and forth, for four interminable hours.

Ah, but when one gets community? Well, things are better then of course. You have much more responsibility, for one thing; and about the same salary as a senior clerk in a decent office who has no responsibility at all. And you have more leisure, for you do not keep a regular watch.

TAKING TO CARPENTRY

But your extra leisure is not much good to you, for your choice of company is limited to the chief engineer, one solitary person. Out of sheer boredom you may mount the bridge, ostensibly as master but in reality to have a yarn with the officer of the watch. That is permitted, though it isn't done to hobnob with the officers when off watch.

Perhaps I should explain here for the benefit of the uninitiated that I am speaking of the average cargo steamer, which forms about 80 per cent. of the British merchant service.

Many masters take to carpentry to keep them from dying of ennui, but they are apt to absorb too much of the time of the ship's carpenter, and the chief officer doesn't like that. Others contrive to take a little too much interest in the work of the ship, and as that

MANCHUKUOFEVER CATCHING IN BORDER AREASFRONTIER
STRATEGY

Peking.

With Soviet Russia and Japan glaring at each other across the Amur River, desperately building railroads, frontier fortifications and flying fields, it has not taken long for the virus of belligerent distrust and its resultant war scare fever to permeate their "wards" Sovietized Outer Mongolia and Manchukuo.

The first outbreak of the rash occurred not long ago when Japanese-Manchukuo patrols clashed with Outer Mongolian frontier guards near Buir Nor, a large lake 160 miles south of Manchukuo, where the Chinese Eastern Railroad crossed the Siberian border to join the Trans-Siberian. Japanese map-makers had begun to make all maps with the lake entirely within Hsilingen Province of Manchukuo. Later, when Mongol patrols were observed inside this new boundary, they were first warned, then driven out by a combined Japanese-Manchukuo column.

Liberal and immediate application of diplomatic balm has apparently ensured that the rash will not spread at present, but reports filtering in from Outer Mongolia as well as from Manchukuo indicate that elaborate defence preparations are being undertaken on both sides of the line.

STRATEGIC IMPORT

The strategic importance of this particular area has often been stressed. Presuming a new Russo-Japanese war in the Far East, it is commonly taken for granted that one of the major Japanese drives will be directed at the supposedly vulnerable stretch of the Trans-Siberian Railway between Lake Baikal and Chita. The attacking column, it is assumed, would advance westward from Dulonor or from the region of Buir Nor onto the steppes of eastern Outer Mongolia, then swing northward, attempt to cross the Siberian frontier and strike at the railway. A strongly militarised Outer Mongolia, it will thus be seen, would form an important first line of defence for the Soviets.

Owing to careful guarding of military secrets by the Japanese, information regarding what is going on in Manchukuo is meagre. One official report recently published, however, indicates that the entire northern half of the Manchukuo-Mongolian frontier is to be guarded by a series of frontier posts. The exact nature of these posts is not announced, but there will be twenty-eight of them, placed at strategic points along a 500-mile stretch of the border.

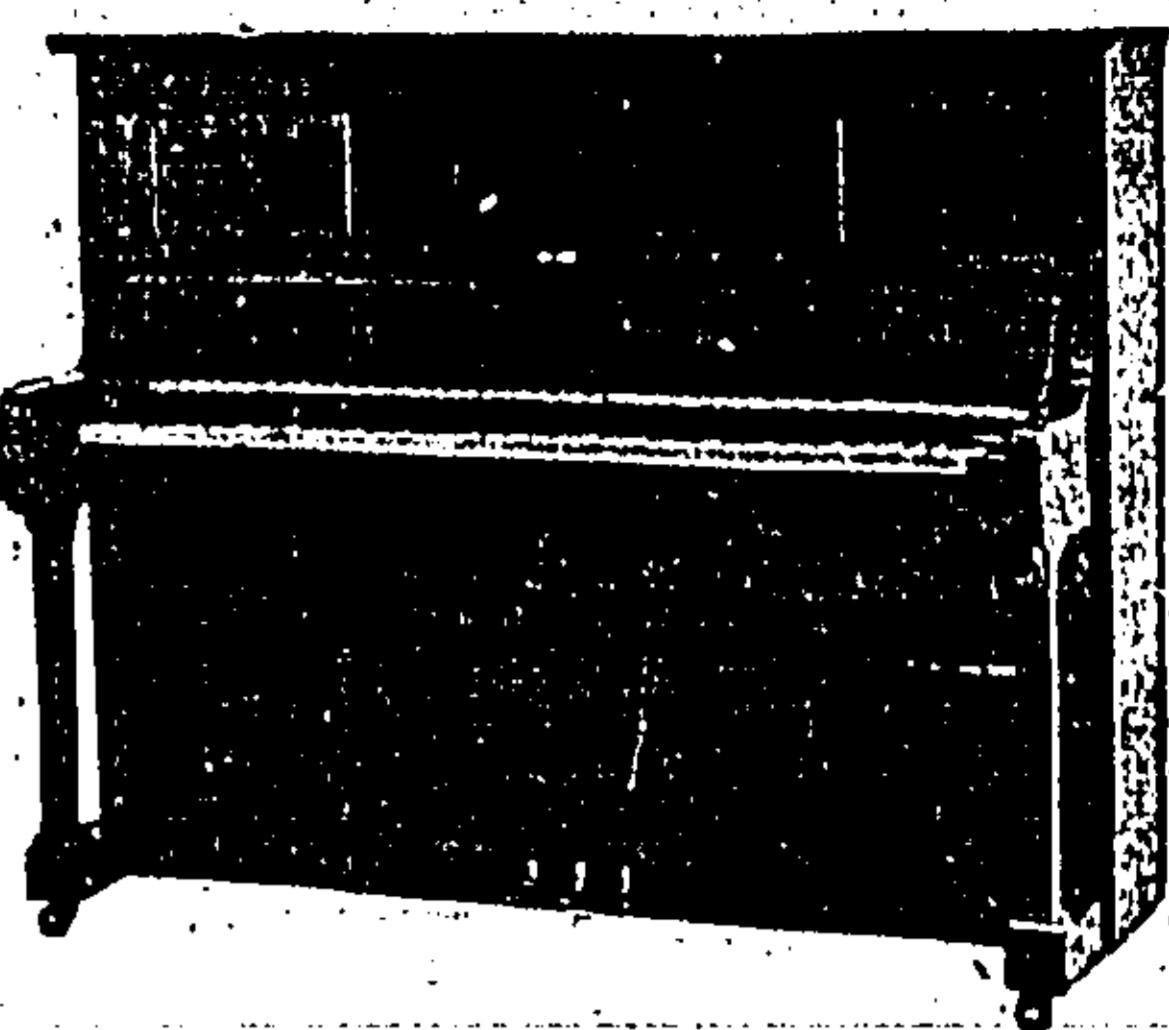

The avowed object of these posts is "to prevent further encroachment on Manchukuo" by the Outer Mongolians, like that which occurred at Buir Nor.

Well-informed circles discount the possibility of armed strife breaking out in the near future, but it can be seen that neither side is in a trustful mood. And with such fuel ready, a very small spark could start a very large fire. United Press.

is the chief officer's special province he doesn't like that either. The master, in short, is a rather lonely bird aboard his ship.

This brief outline might be filled in with innumerable details to prove my point, but I have told enough to show that a life at sea is in general a dull and monotonous procession of days with little if anything for an intelligent man to get his teeth into.

What is the old saying? "Who'd sell a farm and go to sea?"

One Job Gone Wrong!

SUCCESS BORN OF FAILURE PARADOXICAL OCCASIONS IN LIFE OF MAN

By OLIVER BALDWIN

There are occasions in the lives of most men and women when they are forced, perhaps by unemployment or dissatisfaction, or even by overhearing some chance remark, to ask themselves whether or not they are what is termed a "failure." If they are in poor health they will generally decide that they are. Growing more and more depressed, they end by becoming a burden to themselves and a pest to their friends, or even an object of pity at a coroner's inquest.

There is rarely any need for such a tragedy, for the trouble invariably starts with a wrong understanding of what failure is. Of course, if you set yourself some high standard such as to be Prime Minister, or some unnecessary standard, such as to be made a knight; or some difficult standard, such as to write articles for a living, and do not succeed in attaining it, you may well call yourself a failure in that one direction.

S. D. POINT OF VIEW

The mistake is to consider that failure in attaining one's professional objective necessarily entails failure in life. It is only lately that success or failure has become bound up with materialism; for so hard is the struggle to-day for economic existence that we bring all things down to a question of pounds, shillings, and pence.

Yet even material success is only relative; for a successful agricultural labourer at 30s. a week is as far removed from material failure as is a successful business man at £5,000 a year.

Failure must never be measured in terms of money, for that way lies a completely false conception of existence. It is generally the materially-minded who appraise such things, and the false values they create are on a par with jealousy of another's new clothes or of another's social connections.

There can be no failure where honest work is concerned. The doing of one's best may not bring success, but it is a definite contradiction of failure in any sense but the most cruel.

In appraising such a thing, consideration must be made for your natural capability and the suitability of the life's work undertaken. It is only when that is understood that failure or success can truly be judged.

There are greater things than material success, and no man can be called a failure who has made the life of a fellow-creature or of a dumb animal happier. The criminal who is sentenced for a solitary offence against society could only be truly a "failure" in life if that one action of his outweighed all his past; and there are very few people of whom that could ever be said.

OBJECT OF EXISTENCE

I have known many people who have been called failures by more fortunate people, but I compare with several much-admired successful people these failures become people for whom to be thankful. Apart from judging a man a failure in some special occupation, a general judgment cannot be made unless you define the object of existence.

If it be to make money or to attain a high social position, then the failures in life can be counted in their millions. If, on the other hand, it be to make the world a happier or saner place for the vast majority of its inhabitants, then are "failures" often "successes."

In this connection we must not forget that the world is made happier and saner by little individual acts, and that each of us in our own small circle can have such power of doing good.

There are many people alive today who would have called Christ a failure had He lived in their time. St. Francis of Assisi most certainly would have received their condemnation; and there is not an inventor who died poor who is not called a failure by such people for not having profited materially from his invention.

Yet men whose whole lives have been spent training to kill their fellow-men are hailed, when that training is put into practice, as greater successes than almost any other follower of a profession. Such are the values some people set on the object of these short years of life.

MIGHT HAVE BEEN

Perhaps the people most truly worthy of being called failures are the might-have-beens. Those who, gifted above the ordinary, have wasted their talents, have shirked responsibility, or have never found their right niche in life.

Here, again, how much of that has been due to the temperament with which they were born or the circumstances over which they have no control? To-day we are learning how much a man's nature is dependent upon internal glandular secretions, and we are certainly hard to please if we condemn a man as a "failure" because of a deficiency or a surplus of such secretions.

Therefore, we must beware of thoughtless condemnation, for health has more to do with success or failure than is generally realised.

There are men who have thrown away glorious opportunities of success for conscience sake. How do we appraise such people? In many cases such an action has proved a spiritual success and a material failure and it, therefore, depends upon which we place higher—the spirit or the matter—as to how we judge.

Again, there are others who have turned their hand to a new mode of life at middle age, unable to finish the task they enjoyed, for economic reasons. Such people have no cause for calling themselves failures, though disappointment often makes them self-critical.

Success and failure are both impostors, are both relative, and are analysed deeply. Therefore, those people who are in despair and worried over their position in life should take heart and realise that such self-analysis is unnecessary. Generally—it is the result of over-work or a bad digestion.

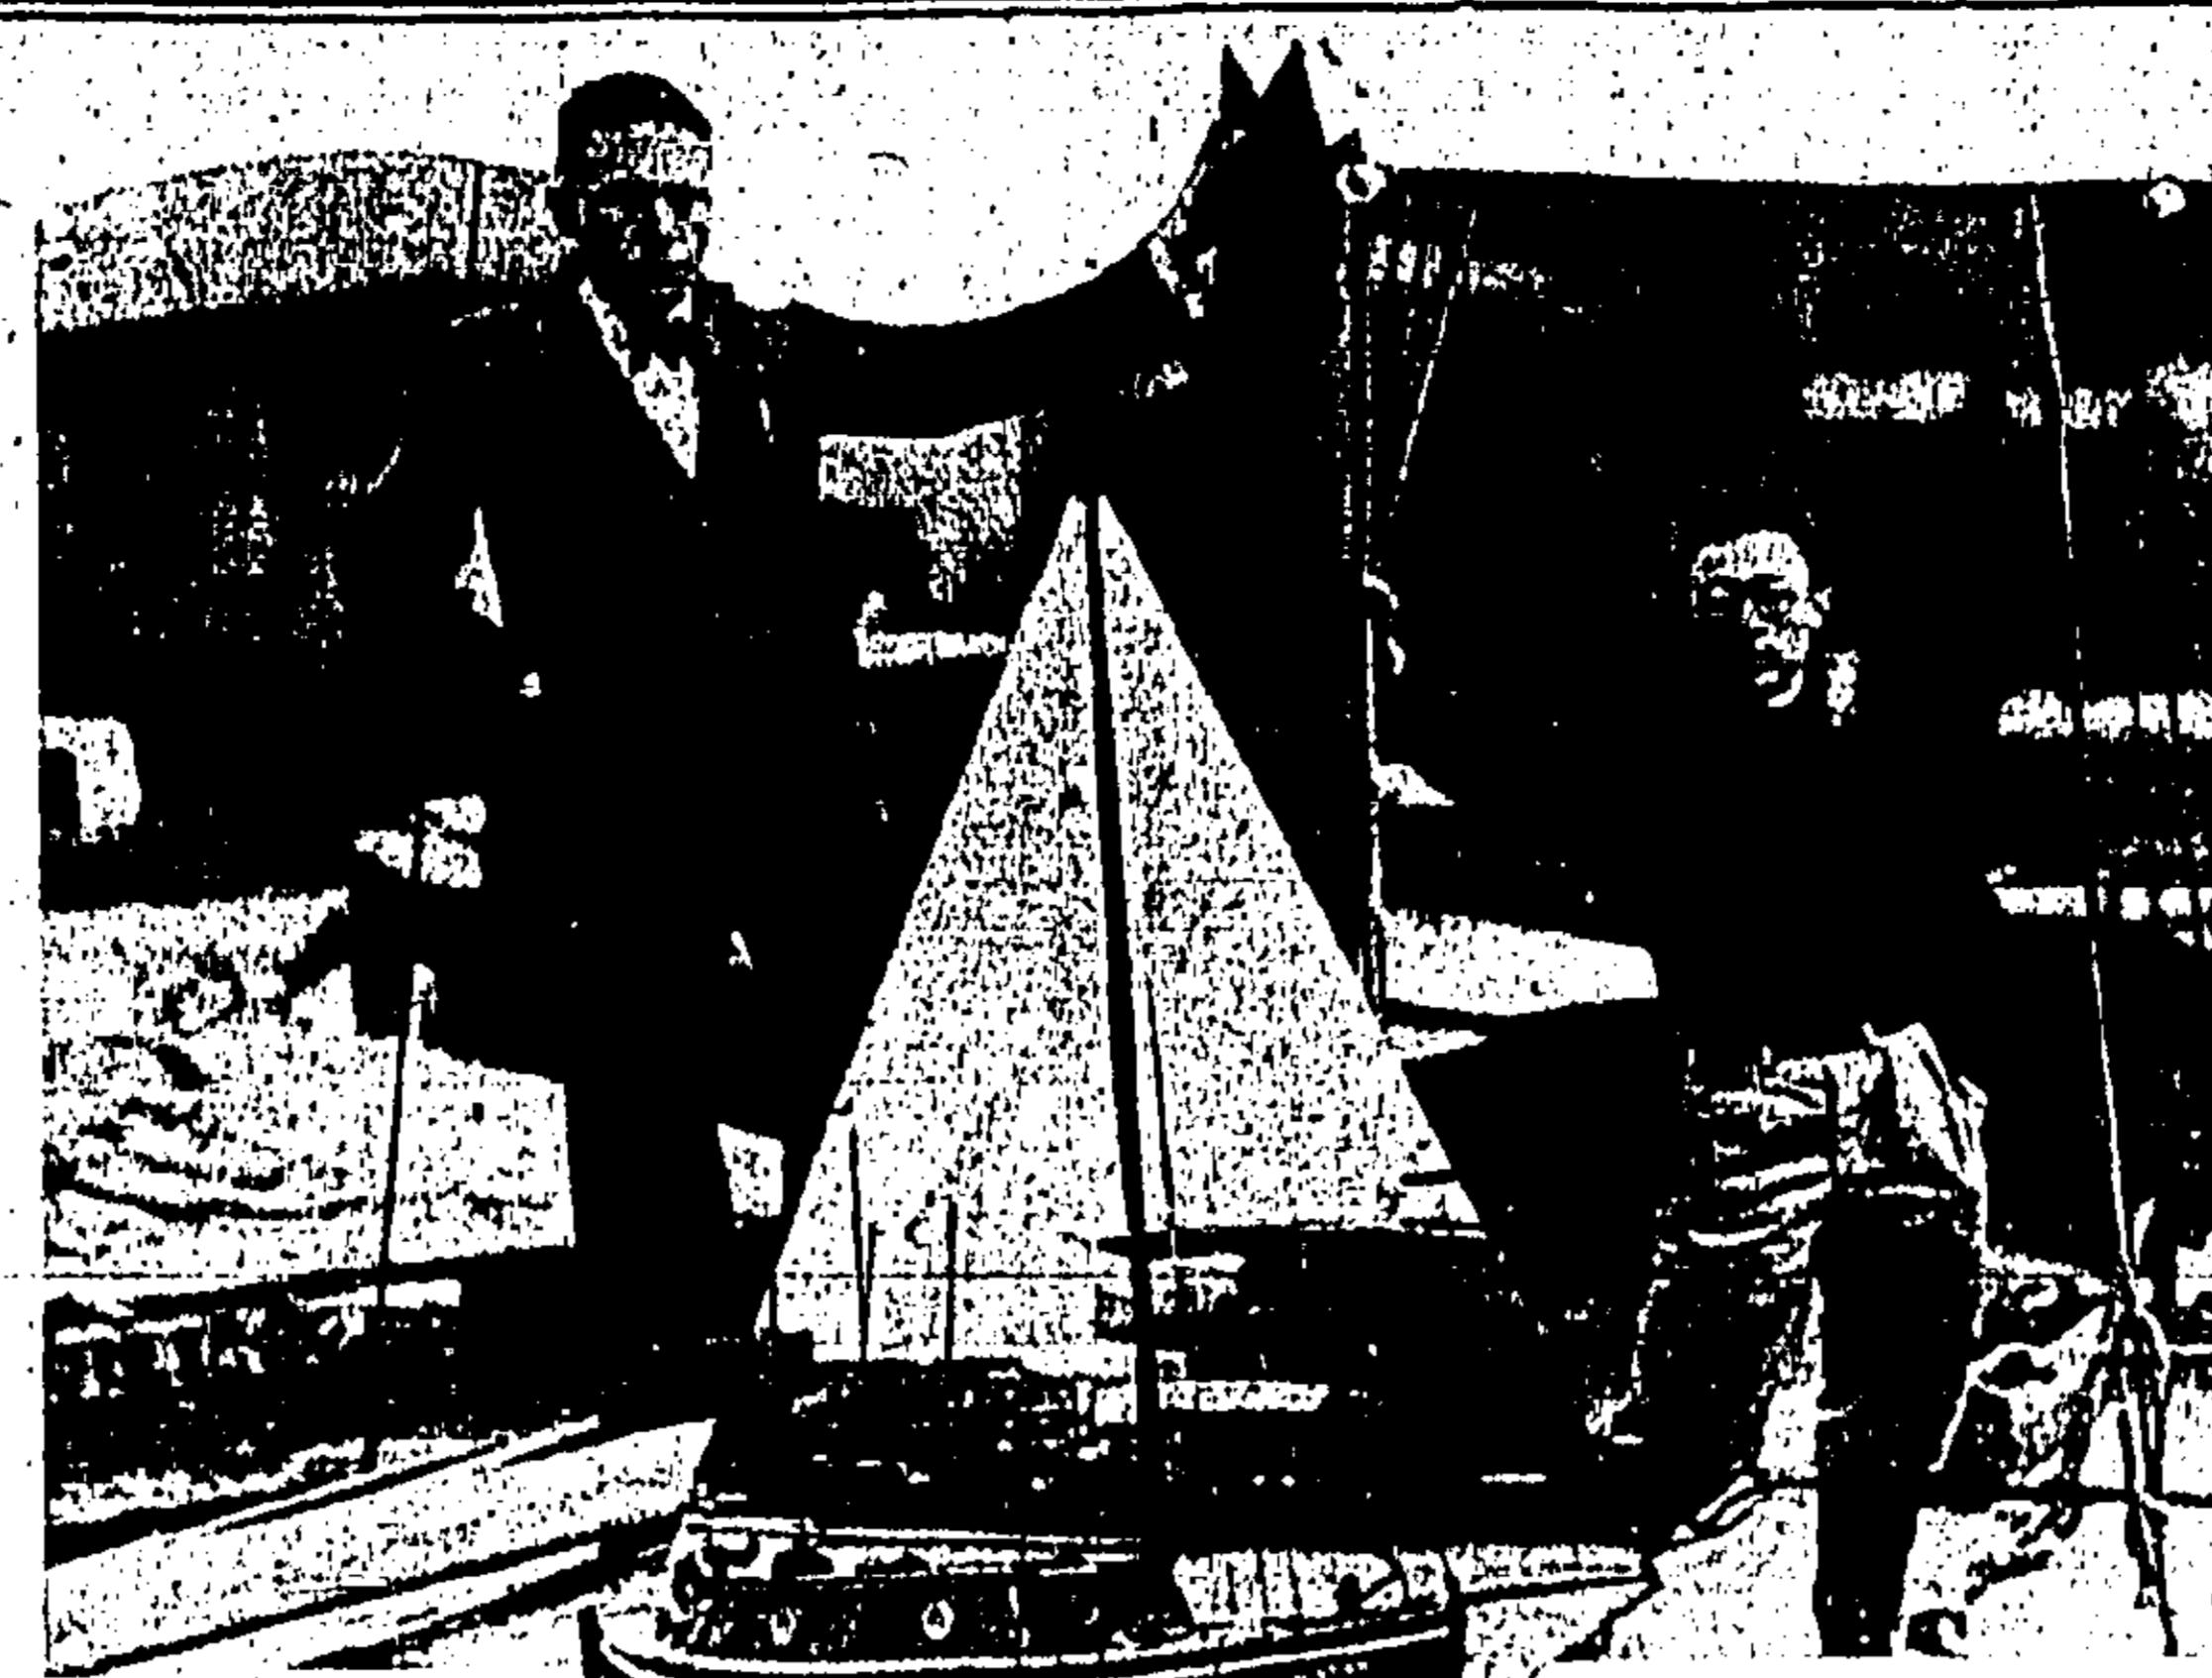

Each one of us has some particular furrow to hoe, and as long as we keep at our job it is not for mankind to judge us. That furrow is not necessarily a definite job of work, but is far more often our general conduct of life.

THE MEASURE

It is the way we treat others and the happiness we spread that is the gauge of our life with which to measure success or failure.

Once and for all we should refuse to acknowledge materialism in our appraisement unless we definitely refer to pecuniary success. We should realise that to gauge failure by anything other than a man's treatment of his fellow-men is to deny the Christian purpose of existence and to deny the basis of ethics.

Man was not put upon this earth to make a fortune or to wear better clothes than his neighbour or to wear medals on his breast. Such

Much interest was shown in the pretty Shanghai wedding which took place at Holy Trinity Cathedral between Mr. Eric G. Gardner, of the Shanghai Land Investment Co., and Miss Marjorie Strike, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Strike. There was a large attendance both at the church and at the reception which was later held at the Masonic Hall.

The huge new pontoon of the City Government Kowloon was officially opened last week, a reception being held in the spacious and beautifully arranged restaurant on the promenade deck. Many high officials of the City Government and the S.M.C. attended. The above picture shows a view of the restaurant which is expected to prove very popular especially in the summer months, when Shanghaileans will be making extensive use of the City Government's boats.

It is a wonder that thousands of pilgrims climb the beautiful Fujiyama every year!

things are but the appendages of the direction of what is good, and that which is good is that which makes others happy and enables us weak humanity.

He was put on earth to use his brain and mind for the benefit of all and to develop his soul in the direction of what is good, and that which is good is that which makes others happy and enables us all to live in brotherhood and unity. If we accept this there is little reason for a man to worry what the world thinks of him. Though few of us can be great successes very few indeed can be called failures.

REDISTRIBUTION OF WEALTH.

At a time when the contrast between the poor and the affluent is being thrown into sharp prominence, it is only to be expected that the question of a possible redistribution of wealth should once again be widely discussed. None the less, a great many enthusiastic people, who desire a reshuffling of this world's goods, allow their ideas to outrun their sense of what is really practical. Yet there really is an immense gap between the abstract belief that wealth should be more equitably distributed and the theory that the only way to do it is to take money directly out of the rich man's pocket and transfer it to the poor. Demagogues who like to present an easy formula to cure all social ills do not appear to see this. An American politician, whose reputation stands high in his country, has now come forward with a proposal for wealth redistribution by the simple process of a progressive federal inheritance tax. This, he points out, does not mean taking property from one man and giving it to another. It means taking money from the estates of the very wealthy, where it performs very little real service to humanity, and spending it in the interests of those at the bottom of the scale. It is contended that such a scheme would check steady, progressive concentration of wealth in the hands of a small class, and would also help materially to relieve the country of pauperism. Arguing that this would put redistribution forward in a fair way, the author of this plan points out that a man's right to profit by his industry or brilliance would not be infringed. Only his right to pile up an untouchable fortune for future generations would be reduced. It is of interest to keep in mind the fact, when considering this question, that America is one of the wealthiest countries in the world, if not the most wealthy, and yet one-third of its people are in beggary and want. Taxes already are abnormally heavy, and it is contended that the further taxation of those feeling the pinch is out of the question. Critics of the scheme mentioned argue that it would place an unfair burden on those who have, in many cases, by their own energies, amassed fortunes. But against this is the contention that the broadest

NOTES OF THE DAY

RUSSIA'S OPPORTUNITY

It is likely that the present Anglo-Russian conversations may prove of immense benefit to the cause of peace in Europe, and all the world, for that matter. For one thing, the very apparent goodwill of the people of Moscow towards the British Minister who is conducting negotiations on behalf of His Majesty's Government, is an indication of the desire of Russians to make friends with a nation which is the very antithesis of all that the Soviet represents. Perhaps the personality of Mr. Anthony Eden has something to do with this; but it is not entirely responsible. Perhaps the Russian philosophy, by its very practicality, will overcome any antipathy towards the British imperialistic faith which may still remain rooted where the fathers of the revolution planted it. Let us hope that we shall see co-ordinated effort on the part of two great nations in the cause of peace; and that British common sense is equal to the Russian pragmatism, that there may be no hindrance to the work Mr. Eden has undertaken, because of prejudices on either side. There was much about the Russian revolution which was horrible and cruel and apparently unreasonable. But out of the blood and ashes of an ancient dynasty, the Soviet may produce that which will have a lasting and immense effect upon world politics; not, as the radical hopes, to be used to tear down the civilisations of other lands and spread world revolution; but to knit more firmly together in a prosperous democracy and peaceful enterprise the peoples of all colours, creeds and convictions.

Many politicians in this country as well as abroad who could not be described as "fanatical" League pacifists are genuinely alarmed because they regard this issue as a decisive test case.

The view certainly of the smaller Powers is that, if in this instance the great Powers betray the Covenant as cynically as they did in the Far East, it will be impossible to retain faith any longer in the security of the weak against the strong under the League.

Why has Italy mobilised an army and transported troops and war material to the Italian colonies adjacent to Abyssinia? The main facts of the situation have been fully reported in the Press. Some of the most important among these facts, however, are not well known to the general public.

How many people are aware that the Italian forces which took part in the armed conflict of December 5 were at Wal-Wal, which is marked on the British general staff sectional map (No. 2871) as being 60 miles within Abyssinian territory?

The British Commissioner in his reports from Wal-Wal speaks of the "provocative attitude adopted by the Italian authorities." He further declares that two Italian aeroplanes trained a machinegun and otherwise demonstrated over the heads of British and Abyssinian Commissioners (engaged in defining the frontier between Abyssinia and British Somaliland) in spite of the fact that the British were flying the Union Jack.

In its efforts to arrive at an equitable solution the British Mission was "constantly thwarted by the unconciliatory and uncompromising attitude of the Italian officer." The Abyssinian Mission also pointed out indignantly that such a procedure on the part of the agents of a Government with which Abyssinia had concluded a treaty of friendship was not in keeping with international usage.

It may well be that Italy has no real intention of annexing large slices of Abyssinian territory, and that her main preoccupation is to protect the Italian colonies. My own fairly precise information is that the last thing Signor Mussolini desires is to be entangled in an awkward war from which no national credit can be won.

None knows better than he that a war, however efficiently planned in the mountainous and heavily wooded territory of Abyssinia, with its fierce tribes fighting for their freedom, would become a singularly bloody and long-drawn colonial struggle in which Italy's real difficulties would begin after she had won the campaign.

For an analogy we have only to look at what happened to the French in Syria, or to the Spaniards in Morocco.

The so-called realists, untouched by the consequences of their

MUSSOLINI CAN STOP A WAR

By A. J. CUMMINGS

THERE is now a rapidly growing recognition of the seriousness open and implied of the present conflict between Italy and Abyssinia. It is serious not only because a threat of war is always serious, but because there has never been a dispute between two

Powers in which the fundamental principles of the League Covenant were more clearly at stake.

Many politicians in this country as well as abroad who could not be described as "fanatical" League

pacifists are genuinely alarmed because they regard this issue as a decisive test case.

The view certainly of the smaller

Powers is that, if in this instance the great Powers betray the Covenant as cynically as they did in the Far East, it will be impossible to retain faith any longer in the security of the weak against the strong under the League.

Italy is bound by an all-in arbitration treaty of 1928 which expressly covers the present conflict. As lately as at the last meeting of the Council Italy undertook to act in the spirit of this treaty. Yet she has virtually presented more than one ultimatum, which she has supported by the dispatch of large bodies of troops.

While nominally accepting a neutral zone suggested by Great Britain, she has done nothing to set it up.

The Italian view, I know, is that there is no iniquity in these proceedings; that Wal-Wal was just a "regrettable incident"; that direct negotiations will settle the issue comfortably; that the dispatch of troops must be considered as an "expedition" and not as a movement of war; that, in order to ensure peace and order in the frontier zone, the Abyssinians must be made to realise that the Italian Army to-day is a different instrument from the Army of 40 years ago; and, finally, that

Abyssinia is a barbar land which ought not to be inside the League at all.

But the immediate charge against Italy is that the way in which she is now conducting the negotiations with Abyssinia, a sister member of the League, is a flagrant contravention of the letter and spirit of the Covenant.

The British Government should use all the influence it undoubtedly commands to persuade Signor

Mussolini, who on many occasions has proved himself "a good European," to return to the path of wisdom and to take the initiative as he now can with no loss of prestige in proposing a Commission, with an impartial personnel to define a permanent frontier.

The Abyssinian Government, which wants a peaceful settlement, will make no difficulties about this solution. The British Government knows from its own

LESS ACTIVITY ON EXCHANGE

(Special to "Telegraph")

New York, March 31. Reflecting the lessening activity on the New York Stock Exchange, the net loss for the year 1934 is reported as $1,060,890 as compared with $109,121 for the year 1933.

Hesitancy among traders still continues in Wall Street and is preventing the making of any definite market policies.

Favourable market factors include:—

(1) Increasing lumber orders and shipment expectations;

(2) Additional refunding operations;

(3) Automobile production continues high.

Unfavourable factors include:—

(1) Chain store sales for March are likely to prove unsatisfactory owing to the international monetary situation;

(2) Continued threats of strikes;

(3) Foreign operators holding aloof.

Cotton prices were two points up to nine points lower on the New York Cotton Exchange, yesterday.

Trading was featured by the continued steadiness of old positions and the renewed easiness of the new months.

The light spot situation and the straddling operations by foreign interests on the export subsidy plan together with the growing opposition to the processing tax, brought sufficient buying to the near months to hold them steady above the previous levels by a few points.

Most of the liquidation came from traders profit-taking and from the South and New Orleans.—United Press.

CHINA DISTILLERY OPENED

TAKES CARE OF DOMESTIC NEEDS

Shanghai, March 31. Ceremonies presided over by Mr. Chen Kung-po, Minister of Industry, were held here this afternoon in connection with the inauguration of the first Chinese Spirit Manufacturing Plant, all equipment and machinery of which were purchased from England.

This is partially a Government enterprise and is financed with capital of $1,500,000. The capacity of the plant is said to be 700,000 gallons of spirit daily, which is sufficient to meet domestic demands.

In a speech delivered before the opening Mr. Chen Kung-po expressed the hope that the Chinese Spirit Manufacturing Plant represents the first step toward developing various branches of the industry in China through co-operation between the Government and the merchants and industrialists.—Central News.

T. V. SOONG JOINS BANK OF CHINA

LOAN ISSUE ENTIRELY TAKEN UP

Shanghai, Apr. 1. It is officially learned that Mr. T. V. Soong has accepted the appointment as chairman of the Board of Directors of the Bank of China, while the governorship of the Bank is to be offered to Mr. Soong Hian-chang.

When interviewed, Dr. H. H. Kung, Finance Minister, expressed the belief that the Ministry of Finance would likely confirm the resolution adopted by the extraordinary meeting of shareholders of the Bank of China, authorising the increase of its reserve capital from $25,000,000 to $40,000,000.

The $100,000,000 worth of loan bonds were issued, from to-day, but will not be placed for sale in the market as they will be fully absorbed by the Central Bank of China, the Bank of China, and the Bank of Communications.—Central News.

ERRATA

Through an unfortunate slip, the trading matter accompanying two illustrations in Saturday's issue of the Telegraph Pictorial Supplement became transposed. The group in which Lady Peel was described as sitting third from the right was in reality the staff of the St. Stephen's Girls' School, in which her "ladyship" did not, of course, appear. We regret the error.

REHABILITATION OF KIANGSI

INDUSTRIAL PROJECTS CONTEMPLATED

Shanghai, Apr. 1. In a statement made to pressmen, Mr. Kung Hsueh-sui, Commissioner of Construction of the Kiangsi Provincial Government, who is here to discuss detailed matters in connection with a $2,200,000 loan from the Chinese Finance Company to finance the construction of a water-works and an electric power plant in Nanchang, declared that negotiations were in progress with certain German merchants for the supply of machinery and other mechanical equipment for these two enterprises.

He went on to say that along with the rehabilitation of the former Red districts in the province, the Provincial Government of Kiangsi would proceed with another ambitious industrial development plan, including the building of a paper mill, timber yard and porcelain factory. The Government hoped that capitalists would co-operate with the Government in carrying out this industrial development programme.—Central News.

CHILD'S BODY DUMPED

DIDN'T KNOW THE REGULATIONS

An unusual case was brought before Mr. Macfadyen at the Central Police Court this morning, when Pui Yun, aged 32, unemployed, was fined $20, or one month's hard labour, for unlawfully moving the body of a male child without the written direction of the Registrar of Births and Death.

It was stated by Sub-Inspector O'Connor that about 7 a.m. yesterday a Sanitary Department constable was on duty outside No. 2 Pat Tze Lane when he saw the defendant dumping the body of a small child outside the house. He made a report to a constable, who made enquiries at the house. The defendant admitted that he had just dumped the body of his small son.

The prosecution produced a doctor's certificate stating that the child had not died from infectious disease.

Defendant pleaded guilty and stated he had just come from the country and did not know the regulations.

MORGAN ART TREASURES

MAGNATE SELLING POSSESSIONS

New York, Mar. 31. Mr. J. Pierpont Morgan has sold his art treasures and real estate and is now trying to sell his yacht, in making preparations for inheritance taxes on his estate.

Rumours that he is prepared to depart to take up residence in England are said to be entirely false.

Mr. Morgan says that he believes that America is safely emerging from the depression.

Also he has expressed the belief that he considers currency inflation to be most unlikely.—United Press.

KING INTERVENES

Brussels, Mar. 30. The Belgian Cabinet apparently clinched its victory regarding the currency devaluation when King Leopold, from reports received, intervened dramatically at the eleventh hour after the Senate had made no response to the Chamber's approval of M. Van Zeeland's monetary plans.—United Press.

DAY BY DAY NEWS IN BRIEF

JUSTICE WAS ORDAINED FROM THE FOUNDATIONS OF THE WORLD AND WILL LAST WITH THE WORLD OR LONGER.—Carlyle.

Cheung Yuk-kwan, aged 18, a fishmonger, was bound over in the sum of $25 for a period of six months, when he appeared before Mr. Macfadyen at the Central Police Court this morning on a charge of assaulting Yu Hung, a shop folk at Hollywood Road. Sub-Inspector O'Connor stated that defendant alleged that he had been beaten and some other men assaulted him at the Tai Ping Theatre at 7:15 p.m. on Saturday. The next day, about 11:30 a.m., the defendant was passed.

ANGLO-RUSSIAN ACCORD

an official communiqué that the Anglo-Russian conversations, designed to perpetuate the peace of Europe, had met with a large measure of success.

Mr. Eden, who has been conducting negotiations with the Russian Government for the past few days, left for Warsaw at 10:45 p.m. to-night, where he will carry on his Government's endeavours to assure all nations of security.

M. Litvinoff, the chief Russian figure in the parleys, and Lord Chilcott, the British Ambassador at Moscow, together with high Soviet officials and diplomats, were at the station to bid Mr. Eden farewell.

The platform to the waiting train was carpeted and a picked guard of honour was drawn up along its length, while Union Jack fluttered alongside the flag of Red Russia.

A little group of busy motion picture cameramen ground away to perpetuate the scene for thousands who have read of the Anglo-Russian talks and who will want to see the principals.

In a brief broadcast address, Mr. Eden, thanked the Soviet for its hospitality, and M. Litvinoff replied: "I wish you success. Your success will be our success now."

It was indicated that the Russian and British spokesmen understood one another and had at least reached firm ground in the formulating of a common policy for the preservation of peace.—Reuter.

R.A. GUNNER CHARGED

adding that it did not state that he was liable to a charge of desertion.

"I occupied my time, waiting for the boat to leave, in walking to Canton," said accused. "I arrived in the evening and decided to get a meal and then give myself up to the civil authorities. I approached an Indian constable on the British Bridge and asked him the way to the Y.M.C.A. He asked me where I came from and I told him I was from Hongkong."

Witness said he was then taken to the Police Station and he there told the Captain Superintendent of Police that he wanted a meal before giving himself up. The police officer detained him at the Police Station until he was taken aboard H.M.S. Cicala prior to being brought back to Hongkong.

Accused was found guilty of the charge preferred of desertion and the sentence will be pronounced later.

EXCHANGE RATES RISE SLIGHTLY

Shanghai, April 1.

Rates are up slightly on the Foreign Exchange Market here this morning, due to Saturday's rise in London silver prices.

Traders, however, are awaiting developments of a definite tendency before making commitments.

On reports of Sassoons' interests buying, the market eased at about 10:15. At 11:00 a.m. the market was slightly steadier.

The market was easier at the close of the morning session. U.S. Dollars are quoted at 37 5/10 and sterling 1/2 1/2.

Gold bars were $84.00.

It is widely rumoured that Sassoons are now overbought.—United Press.

 Civilians—Rodger, C. Pile and Strange; Brooks, Beltrao, and Parker; B. Gosano, Ward, Howe, A. V. Gosano and Bickford.
 Army—Rowland, Swain and Steele; Keneghan, Morton and North; English, Sandford, Higgins, Ridley and Baldry.

Albert Howe, scoring three very clever goals, beat the Army and retained the Lai Wah Cup for the Civilians on Saturday, when the teams contested the final under deplorable conditions. The result rested on Howe's finishing; it was this which left the Army a defeated team, for so far as the game went, there was practically nothing to choose between the sides.

The Army had an equal share of the exchanges and at intervals were more dangerous on the attack than the Civilians. Their forwards, however, fell away badly in the second half and rarely threatened Rodger.

A continuous drizzle and a ground already made difficult by rain did not tend to lift the foothold to a high standard and under the circumstances the players performed with distinct credit. Practically everything depended on the speed and accuracy with which the ball was transferred from one player to the other and in this respect the Civilians earned chief honour.

IMPOSING MOVEMENTS

There were times when the forwards swept up the field in imposing style, the ball moving rapidly from wing to wing and allowing the Army defenders but little time to position themselves. It was by such methods that the Civilians scored their four goals.

Howe missed something like a dozen opportunities through lack of ball control, but his three goals showed the enterprising centre-forward at his best. The third point was a magnificent effort, Howe slipping across to the left side of the field and shooting first time on the turn from

Orders To Umpires

"DEAD BALL" AT 3RD OFFENCE

London, Mar. 7.

In its attack on "bodyline" bowling the M.C.C. have drawn up rules for umpires for the coming season—and, of course, given the hardworking umpires more than ever to do.

After deciding upon these, a sub-committee of the M.C.C. called first-class umpires to a conference and submitted the proposals to them.

These rules, which will be further considered by the M.C.C. on Monday, are understood to give a player who bowls "bodyline" three chances before an appeal is taken against him in the field. This action will be as follows:

First bodyline ball: bowler warned by umpire.

Second bodyline ball: umpire calls "dead ball"; bowler withdraws for rest of innings.

A SPOT OF BOTHER

What will happen if a batsman is bowled or caught from the second "body-line" delivery? An umpire yesterday replied to this question: "He will be out, I suppose. That is one of the little things which are going to bother us next season."

A point that is giving concern to umpires is the time that may elapse before the bowler is "pulled up."

The M.C.C., however, consider that the knowledge that the rule is in existence will prove a sufficient deterrent, and will probably prevent "direct attack" bowling being even attempted.

UMPIRES AND I.B.W.

The umpires have themselves taken a hand to provide "brighter" cricket. They have expressed their view that the "snick" I.B.W. rule which was dropped last season should be restored. The motion was fully considered at a well-known umpire said: "We umpires want to combine the old 'snick' rule with the new I.B.W. rule. That would mean that if a batsman snicked a ball even a foot outside his off-stump, and it struck his leg in line between wicket and wicket, he would be out."

Beltrao was outstanding among the halves, although Brooks was prominent in the second half and shadowed Ridley very effectively.

Ash, who defended brilliantly for the Lincolns yesterday.

15 yards range, the ball entering the top corner of the net.

Nevertheless Ward was the most skilful performer in the Civilian attack. He "made" two of Howe's goals by perfect through passes and he rarely wasted the ball.

Beltrao was outstanding among the halves, although Brooks was prominent in the second half and shadowed Ridley very effectively.

PILE'S INTERCEPTIONS

Brilliant interceptions featured a thoroughly good display by Chris Pile at right back, and the manner in which he adapted himself to a strange position was commendable.

There was not a real weakness in the Civilians' team, although some of the players were unable to adapt themselves to the conditions so well as others, and accordingly were not so prominent.

Howe was the most entertaining performer in the Army Eleven, the energetic centre-forward accomplishing a lot of hard and useful work against a sound defence. He was certainly more dangerous than any of the other forwards.

Beltrao schemed, but was not always well supported. Both Baldry and Sandford nullified Ridley's creative labours by slowness or bad finishing.

Apart from scoring a good goal, Sandford was not a success, while Baldry and English were far too well watched by the opposition half backs to contribute anything much to the game.

Morton did not find his feet until the second half when he came into his own by keeping Howe in check.

Keneghan was mediocre against the Bickford and A. V. Gosano combination.

TWO SOCCER TITLES DECIDED

Interest In Game Now On The Wane

(By "Veritas")

WITH the Lai Wah Cup concluded and two championship titles in the league decided, interest in local football is beginning to wane. The important games now outstanding are the International Charity Cup final, the Governor's Cup deciding match and the Kotewall Charity Cup engagements.

BURSTS of fire-crackers greeted South China's victory at Sookunpoo yesterday signifying the winning of the first division championship.

There was much demonstration on the Navy ground, although the result of the East Lancashires v. R.A.C.C. game was just as important as that the East Lancs. won the third division honours. The second division title will probably be won next week, by the Lincolns. They require but two points to clinch the issue.

THE Fusiliers amply confirmed the impression that in many respects they are one of the best teams in local football. They were well above the Navy in the more subtle arts of the game and were so completely dominant in midfield that any other result but a decisive win seemed out of the question. But to repeat that trust of all football truisms, "It's goals that count," and when a team refuses to shoot goals from ideal positions, then

defeat must be expected.

THE Navy improved their chances of finishing next to the Lincolns in the second division by virtue of their win yesterday over East Lancashire, although the latter are still better placed, having two games in hand over the Nauticals and being but one point in arrears.

FOUR teams have already completed the season's programme in the third division, and the next three weeks should see the remaining matches cleared off. The championship has been settled, but the runners-up honours have to be decided. R.A.S.C.

are well placed, and require only to win their last match to supersede the Lincolns who at present hold that position.

THERE was a much improved atmosphere about the football this

last weekend. The Lai Wah Cup

game was played in the best of spirit,

and beyond technical faults there was nothing to mar yesterday's match at Sookunpoo. But while local games were played in peace and goodwill

Shanghai saw an ugly affair at the Stadium when a riot broke out during

the match between Tung Hwa and the Police. It was a far more serious

thing than that which happened at Sookunpoo the other day. The crowd

because much out of hand that several people were injured and only by pushing up a riot squad was it possibly to quell the flaring tempers.

Morton did not find his feet until the second half when he came into his own by keeping Howe in check.

PENALTY TURNS TREND OF THE GAME

TAM KONG-PAK'S HEADER WINS CHAMPIONSHIP

ASH AND RIDLEY SEEN AT THEIR BEST

(By "Veritas")

Lincolns 2 S. China "A" 3
 Lincolns—Rend; Ash and Edmund; Deeming, Thompson and Robson; English, Higgins, Higgins, Ridley and Baldry.
 S. China—Wong Wing; Leung In-chan and Lau Mau; Lau Hing-choi, Leung Wing-chui, and Lee Kwok-wai; Tsoo Wai-kiing, Chan Tak-fai, Tam Kong-pak, Ip Pak-wa and Ng Po-kuai.

A penalty early on in the second half which the Lincolns were rather unfortunate to have to concede altered the whole trend of this game and saw South China pull up from a 2-1 deficit to win by the odd goal in five and with it the championship.

Taking the match in its fullest perspective South China were just about a goal better than the Lincolns, but this superiority was not manifest until the second half. But the Lincolns owed everything to individuals, whereas the Chinese were thoroughly sound in all departments and by consistent endeavour obtained the goals necessary to win the first division title.

ASH AND RIDLEY

For the most part the match was extremely entertaining. The Lincolns certainly put up a much better opposition than was generally anticipated and nothing better has been seen at Sookunpoo than the brilliant defending of Ash and the dazzling first half performance of Dick Ridley. Unhappily for the Lincolns these displays were not reflected throughout the team. There were glaring half weaknesses, while the success of the attack depended entirely on Ridley and Higgins. The right wing could do nothing, and the left wing was not in the least bit impressive and invariably came off second best against Lau Hing-choi in a duel for passes.

Ridley seldom saw the way Tsao Kwing-wei went out that speedy winger got on the move and it was the inability of the Lincolns to throttle the right wing which was chiefly instrumental in their defeat.

Thompson did attempt to be constructive, but in so doing he tended to neglect his task of checking the Tam Kong-pak-Ip Pak-wa combination. Deeming was about the best of the rounded and outward sweep of the arms under the water surface, was permitted by the rule defining the breast stroke movements, the hon. secretary stated that he had replied in the affirmative. His reply was confirmed, but the Bureau resolved that such a development of the stroke is undesirable, and that an amendment to the existing rule should be submitted to the next Congress with a view to its prevention.

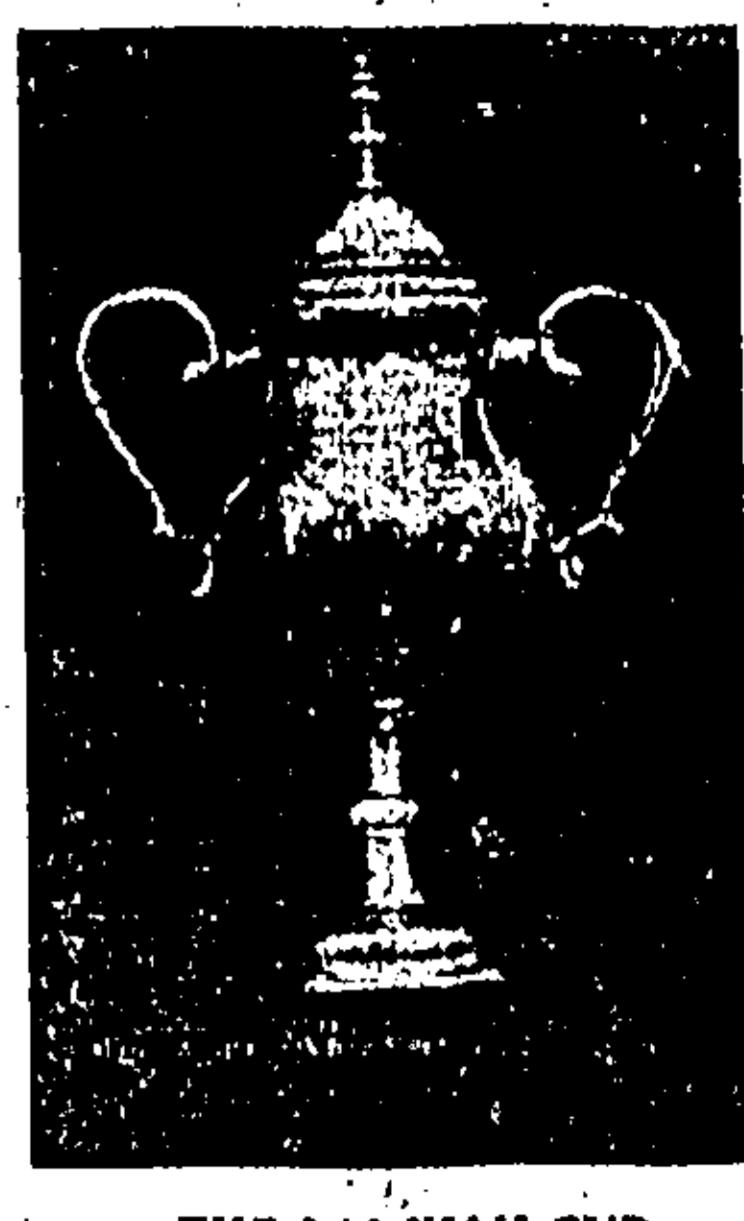

Obviously, the Bureau representatives were not in sympathy with the innovation, otherwise they would not have suggested an amendment to the existing rule.

As the matter stands the butterfly movement conforms to the rules of breast stroke swimming, and the point at issue is, how the rules to be altered to make the stroke illegal because some enterprising individual has discovered a new method which gives infinitely better results without infringing the International Federation rules on breast stroke swimming which came into operation in 1938.

In the meantime American swimmers continue to advance with the new stroke, John Higgins, competing for the Central High School, Providence, Rhode Island, at a school meet in the Harvard University's 25 yards bath, covered 100 yards breast stroke in 1 min. 3 4-sec., using the new style, and disposed of his own world's record of 1 min. 5 3-sec.

Ricketts is a somewhat more virile player and can be a real menace from the net. Nevertheless his backhand volley remains a distinct weakness, and if Leonard is able to expose this the result may be all against general expectations.

Normally Leonard's steadiness pulls him through a match, but if he finds Ricketts less disposed than his earlier opponents to commit errors, the Craigengower representative may find it necessary to alter his style of play, and this will probably suit Ricketts better than anything else.

HOWE'S THREE GOALS DO THE TRICK

South China
Had To Fight Hard

The introduction of Chan Tak-fai into the forward line was a big success, this young player performing very creditably. He concentrated on creating openings for his colleagues and in this respect did more valuable work than if he had gone for goals.

Tam Kong-pak and Ip Pak-wa played well enough to demand careful watching, and but for Ash they would probably have netted a number of goals. Tam completed an afternoon of sound and intelligent football by converting the penalty which put South China on level terms and then heading in the winning goal in inimitable style.

The game was played at a fast pace, and although the slippery surface of the ground occasionally defeated the players in their efforts to keep the ball moving quickly, the first half exchanges were notable for many brilliant movements by both sets of forwards.

RIDLEY OUTWITS DEFENCE

It was Ridley who, receiving in his own half, side-stepped his way past three opponents and then delivered the ball to Higgins with an ideal through pass, which in his stride and beat Wong Wing with a ground shot.

The Lincolns thoroughly deserved the lead, but they did not keep it for longer than two minutes, the Chinese swooping down for Chan Tak-fai to beat Read after the ball had hit the cross-bar.

The Chinese twice went very close to scoring again after this, Tao Kwei-ching making Read save brilliantly from a fierce drive, while the goalkeeper cleverly sliced over a curling shot by Ip Pak-wa.

But it was the Lincolns who went ahead again and once more it was through Ridley, who slammed in a perfect shot from 25 yards range. Wong Wing being easily beaten. The Lincolns' advantage was held until the interval, and with the Lincolns holding their own very well in defence there was a distinct prospect of South China suffering their first league defeat of the season. Calamity befell the soldiers, Robson handling in the penalty area, and Kong-pak made no mistake from the spot kick and shortly afterwards Edmiston fouled Tao a little distance from the corner flag.

CHANCES MISSED

The outside right placed an ideal centre into the goalmouth and Tam's head did the rest. After this the Lincolns were rather out of the picture. Ridley could not get going again and Higgins was also too well shadowed to find opportunities for those quick dashes through the defence. Both English and McGuinness had chances, but they were too slow, insisting upon getting the ball under complete control before attempting to shoot; the quick moving Chinese defenders were thus able to clear with ease. Baldry also made a bad blunder towards the close and on the whole the Lincolns had no cause to complain about the result.

FUSILIERS SHOOT

THREE DAYS' COMPETITIONS ON KOWLOON RANGE

Men of the 2nd Battalion, the Royal Welch Fusiliers, held a very successful three days' shoot over the Kowloon Ranges on Thursday, Friday and Saturday last week, and yesterday the winning competitors received their prizes at the hands of Col. H. E. Hindson following the meeting.

Swain and Steele gave an improved account of themselves although their tendency to falter under pressure was again exposed. Nevertheless, both kicked very well first time, while Steele occasionally came into the limelight with some smart covering.

POLISHED ROWLANDS

Rowlands gave a polished display in goal. He had no chance with the shot which passed him, but saved at least four other goal-scoring shots by reason of his admirable anticipation and quick decision.

The Army made a promising start and fairly monopolised the play in the first ten minutes. A well concealed movement which carried the ball into the Civilians' penalty area was beautifully rounded off by Sandford who rushed in and beat Rodger with his first time ground shot.

The lead, however, was short-lived. A force attack on the Army goal saw A. V. Gorano obtain possession after Rowlands had made two partial saves and the inside left banged the ball into the net.

After this it was mostly the Civilians. Howe netted three times in succession to give them what proved to be a winning lead. Higgins succeeded in reducing the arrears before the interval, but the Civilians were value for their advantage.

The game deteriorated sadly in the second half and there was a considerable amount of inconclusive field play, with players mistaking and spilling others, spoilt by foolish shambles. The Army held their own territorially but seldom looked like goal-scorers.

Pile was outstanding during this period and Syd Strange was solid. Belford had a good deal of the ball but did not always make the best use of it, while A. V. Gorano was out of his depth at inside left.

SERIAL STORY

SILKEN SPINDLES

by Anna Lou Brookman

CHAPTER XXX

Gale drew back, staring at Brian Westmore. She said, "I shouldn't have come—"

His hand on her arm tightened almost roughly. "Don't!" he said. "You don't understand. I love you, Gale."

"But you can't! You mustn't say that!"

"Why not?"

"Because you—mustn't."

Brian laughed. "That's not like you, Gale. You know that's no reason at all. It's—" he paused suddenly, and then went on in a dulled tone, "Oh, I guess I understand. You mean you're not in love with me. Is that it? There's someone else?"

Only the night before Gale had heard those words. "Someone else," Steve had said to her. And she had assured him that there was no one else with whom she was in love. She had told herself she was never going to see Brian Westmore again. She couldn't be in love with him. And here he was waiting, watching her with that hurt, anxious look in his face.

She said, "It's not that—"

"Then what is it, Darling?" Her heart beat a mad tattoo. "I'll always have this to remember," Gale thought. "I'll always remember he called me 'Darling'." She looked up and said, "You know it's impossible. You and I can't be in love with each other."

"But that's nonsense. I think I've been in love with you from the very first time I saw you. Does that surprise you? Well, perhaps it does. It surprises me, too. I didn't know—I didn't realize until a minute ago—but oh, I've been crazy about you all along!"

He would have taken her in his arms again but she drew back. "You keep forgetting so much," Gale told him. "You forget you're Brian Westmore and I'm—just a girl who works in the mill."

"You're just the most wonderful girl in the world; that's what you

Gale smiled. What girl wouldn't, with Brian looking at her like that? "Well," she said, "the most wonderful girl in the world wants to go home."

"Not now. I tell you I'm in love with you, girl! I want to turn cartwheels and dance in the streets. Oh, Gale, you are so sweet! You've done something to me, do you know that? Hypnotized me, put me under a spell. I haven't been thinking about anything for days except when I was to see you again. You can't keep me away from you from now on, the way you have been. You've got to let me take you places, got to let me come to see you."

"I'll let you," she promised, surprised at herself, "but we really must go now."

"Then don't you think there should be a picture of the label in the advertisement? Large enough so everyone who sees it will know what it is?"

"By George, you're right! I'll speak to Perkins in the morning."

They had reached the crossing of two main highways. A car was coming toward them and Gale and Brian halted, waiting for it to pass. It was a roadster, driven by a youth who was hatless. There was a girl beside him and another couple in the rumble seat. The car was coming at terrific speed. As it rushed past there was a shout and an arm raised in greeting.

"Who was that?" Gale asked.

"Wally Carter. Some day he'll get into trouble, driving the way he does."

Gale knew who Wally Carter was. The nephew of Josiah Carter, president of the Citizens' National Bank. Wally Carter was one of Brian's friends, just as Vicki Thatcher and her crowd were. Suddenly Gale saw again the deep chasm that lay between them—Brian and his friends on one side, she and the rest of the mill workers on the other. She had almost forgotten for a little while; it was pleasant to forget. But she mustn't do it again. The chasm was still Wally Carter was one of Brian's friends, just as Vicki Thatcher and her crowd were. Suddenly Gale saw again the deep chasm that lay between them—Brian and his friends on one side, she and the rest of the mill workers on the other. She had almost forgotten for a little while; it was pleasant to forget. But she mustn't do it again. The chasm was still

"Then don't you think there should be a picture of the label in the advertisement? Large enough so everyone who sees it will know what it is?"

"By George, you're right! I'll speak to Perkins in the morning."

They had reached the crossing of two main highways. A car was coming toward them and Gale and Brian halted, waiting for it to pass. It was a roadster, driven by a youth who was hatless. There was a girl beside him and another couple in the rumble seat. The car was coming at terrific speed. As it rushed past there was a shout and an arm raised in greeting.

"Who was that?" Gale asked.

"Wally Carter. Some day he'll get into trouble, driving the way he does."

Gale knew who Wally Carter was.

Premiums Are High

Honours are scored as in contract: Four trump honours in one hand, 100; five trump honours in one hand, 150, and at no trump four aces in one hand, 160.

When a player is not vulnerable and makes a game, he receives a bonus of 500 points in addition to his contract score, and when he is vulnerable and scores another game he receives a bonus of 1,000 points in addition to his contract score. This ends the rubber.

The premiums for slams made are: Small Slam, not vulnerable, 500 points; vulnerable, 750 points. Grand Slam, not vulnerable, 1,000 points; vulnerable, 1,500 points.

In playing Towle for money, one should greatly reduce the stakes played for at contract. The reduction should be about three to one, because in Towle when you lose you pay every other player.

FIGHT OVER WAGE COMPLAINT

Trouble over wages at the new site of the Central British School at Au Pui Lung, Kowloon City, led to the appearance of a Hakka workman before Mr. Wynne-Jones at the Kowloon Magistracy this morning, charged with assaulting three tallowmen, Li Kwong, Cheng Li and Leung Ki. All were admitted to hospital. Li Kwong being detained for four days while the other two were allowed to proceed home.

The trouble occurred on March 27 when about 200 workmen became angry over not being paid their weekly wages and demanded that the supervisor, Mr. Affamassoff, of the Eastern Mercantile and Construction Company, go to the Police Station to guarantee their being paid their money.

It was alleged that on the way to the station about twenty of the mob became involved in a fight, and the defendant was alleged to have assaulted the three tallowmen. Two of them were present in Court to-day, and Li Kwong in evidence deposed that the crowd became noisy, complaining they had no money to buy food.

Replying to the Magistrate, Li Kwong stated that the workmen were paid once a week, on Wednesday, in the afternoon. They had not been paid the previous Wednesday, and on March 27 they were due for fourteen days' wages. Witness did not know why they were not paid.

After hearing further evidence, the Magistrate decided to discharge the defendant as the evidence given by the witness did not implicate him in the alleged assault.

Replying to the Magistrate, Mr. Affamassoff stated that all the workmen were now paid.

The Magistrate advised Mr. Affamassoff to tell his manager to pay the men regularly in future, and not to keep them waiting.
